WILSON URGES FIGHT

HARRY THAW CHEERED BY CANADIANS AS HE LEAVES JAIL

SHERIFFS TO TRAIL THAW TO BORDER.

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug 27.—Authorities are here from New Hampshire and Vermont, ready to follow Thaw to the boundary by auto or train and seize him the moment he enters either State. High Sheriff Holman A. Drew of Coos County, N. H., is acting for New Hampshire. High Sheriff Richard Beattie of Essex County is here for Vermont. High Sheriff Hill of Orleans County, Vt., is also here.

WRIT PETITION IS DELAYED UNTIL THIS AFTERNOON

SHERBROOKE, P. Q. Aug. 27.—Thaw's fate in Canada still hangs in the balance.

After a heated discussion between New York's State counsel and Judge Globensky, during which Jacobs, for New York was sharply rebuked and his protest ignored, the Judge adjourned court until 3 o'clock this afternoon. He will then announce his decision on the plea of Thaw counsel to withdraw habeas corpus proceedings.

Judge Globensky came into court at 10:20. He had hardly taken his seat on the bench when Counsellor Shurtleff, for Thaw, announced the action of the defence toward a discontinuance of the writ.

There was a sharp exchange between Thaw's lawyers and the court as to procedure, the latter challenging the application of Civil Code in habeas corpus proceedings. A pause while both sides locked up references was rudely broken when Attorney Jacobs, for the State of New York, arose to protest in behalf of the containing party.

"There is no containing party," declared the judge.

"I maintain there is a containing party," replied Jacobs.

"I will hear no remarks from anybody except those who asked for the writ of habeas corpus at this time."

"I demand the right to be heard in this matter. I ask that an entry be made," said Mr. Jacobs turning to the clerk of court, "that this court refuses to listen to any protest against this discontinuance of this writ."

"Don't make that entry," cried the judge.

Without warning there came a wild burst of applause. It came from all parts of the courtroom, women cheered and waved handkerchiefs, men shouted, the noise last three minutes.

The New York lawyers looked thunderstruck.

"Three cheers for Thaw," cried somebody.

"Silence," shouted the officials, but they were drowned.

"This court is adjourned until 3 o'clock," declared the judge.

Thaw leaped to his feet, his eager face beaming. Women threw flowers and books and handkerchiefs at his feet. Men tried to lift him to their shoulders, but lawyers crowded around him.

Judge Globensky, smiling pleasantly and apparently enjoying the demonstration as much as anybody, left the court room, but the spectators took their time about filing out.

"Isn't this glorious," cried Thaw. "I

Supt. McClellan of Gas Co. in Fire Peril; Two Injured

Van Voorhis Mansion at Beecham Point Damaged.

Two firemen were injured, and James McClellan, superintendent of the New England Gas & Coke Company, was overcome by smoke, when a three-alarm fire practically destroyed the Van Voorhis mansion on Beecham Point, near the Mystic River today. McClellan and his family occupied the house.

Lieutenant Theodore Parker and Hoseman Thomas Gallacher of the department were blown down stairs by a hot air explosion. They suffered painful burns and bruises.

Plead Guilty to Holding Up Woman

HOLYOKE, Aug. 27.—Harold Potvin' alias Earl Waite, and Augustus French, alias Frank Stetson, pleaded guilty today to stealing money and jewels totalling $1,622 from Mrs. Carry LaPointe, and were held in $3,000 each for the September term of the Superior Court.

The two men with another, masked, held up Mrs. LaPointe, and at the point of a revolver forced her to open her safe. They were arrested in Springfield, and the police say they found $217 in money, a diamond ring worth $400, and other jewelry, in their room. The police say the men confessed to pawning $250 worth of jewels in Worcester and $300 worth in Boston.

New Haven Makes Bond Concession

New Petition May Eliminate Big Cost of Underwriting.

The New Haven railroad today made what is considered a concession to the stockholders who object to the high cost of underwriting the new bond issue, by filing a substitute for the petition originally presented to the Public Utilities Commission, asking authorization for the bonds.

The original petition asked permission to issue $67,552,000 in 6 per cent. bonds, and estimated the cost of underwriting would be $1,600,000. The petition filed today omits all reference to the cost of underwriting. Whether the underwriters have agreed to waive underwriting charges is a mystery.

At the stockholders' meeting which voted the bonds, objection was made that the House of Morgan was taking a big profit out of this underwriting.

A hearing on the petition has been set for September 9.

Tuttle's Daughter Elopement Bride

Now on Honeymoon with Former Chauffeur of B. & M. Executive.

The romantic marriage on July 29 of Mrs. Effie Tuttle Foster, daughter of former President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston & Maine, and David H. Brown, once a chauffeur in Mr. Tuttle's employ, has just been revealed through their presence at York Beach, Maine, on their honeymoon. A friend of Mrs. Brown, one of the few in the secret, declared the wedding was really an elopement.

Brown, it was learned today, often carried his bride as a passenger before her first marriage, when the Tuttle family made motor trips about the State. When she was again free to wed, Brown began to pay ardent court.

No date had been set for the wedding and, before hardly one of Mrs. Foster's friends even knew of their engagement, two of them were bidden to come to Tremont Temple to be witnesses of the marriage. The Rev. Cortland Myers performed the ceremony.

Herreshoff Yacht Hit by Rifle Ball

Charge Bullet Came from Newport Training Station.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—An investigation is being made at the Naval Training Station today to see if the rifle ball which crashed through the dining saloon window of the steam yacht Eugenia, owned by John B. Herreshoff, endangering Mrs. Herreshoff and a dozen guests, who were at luncheon, came from the local range.

The bullet shattered the deckhouse window on the starboard side and, passing within a few feet aft of the party, became embedded in the door of a pantry. Mrs. Herreshoff and her guests were all badly frightened, and when it was found a 38-calibre bullet caused the trouble there was more alarm felt, especially as it passed so close to the members of the party.

The ball is believed to be one that glanced from a steel target at the train'ng station and reached the Eugenia ball a mile off shore. The bullet was not served to figure at today's inquiry.

WORCESTER, Aug. 27.—An estate of $100,000 is to be divided among the members of the family of Albert H. Wheeler of Southbridge, whose will was filed today in the Probate Court.

MAYOR'S 'L' OFFER REJECTED

Arbitrators attempting to effect a settlement of the Elevated troubles today turned down Mayor Fitzgerald's request to have the city represented at the hearings. The decision was announced by Chairman James J. Storrow just before noon today.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George A. Flynn presented the request of the Mayor and argued that as the controversy was one that affected the whole people of Boston, a direct representative of Boston should be allowed to make a formal entry of appearance at the hearing.

Organizer Fred T. Fay of the Carmen's Union opposed the request of the Mayor.

"We want," said Organizer Fay, "no assistance, advice or suggestion from Mayor Fitzgerald."

Chairman Storrow, in announcing the decision of the three arbitrators on the question, announced that the matter was one between two parties, the Elevated on one side and the employes on the other. "Accordingly," said Chairman Storrow, "we must confine the question here to the two parties directly involved. No one else has, but now at least, a standing here."

Mayor Fitzgerald gave out a statement this afternoon, declaring that he felt the city had a right to be represented at the Elevated conferences, saying:

I cannot possibly see any objection, in fact I see my duty positive in the matter, because the highways over which the road operates are public highways owned by the citizens.

The service rendered by the Elevated Road is a public service engaged in by millions of people, and inasmuch as no one of the board represents the public some voice should be heard in the public interest.

Gamble on Name of Charlton at Naples

Public Excited Over Coming of Accused Wife Slayer.

NAPLES, Aug. 27.—There is so much excitement here over the coming of Porter Charlton, accused wife slayer, that people are eagerly buying lottery tickets bearing the numbers supposed to be connected with the name Charlton, the first American to be tried in Italy on a murder charge.

The steamer Re Italia, with Charlton aboard, was expected here today, but has been delayed. Probably she will not arrive till Thursday, and Charlton may not be landed here, but taken on to Genoa thence to Lake Como.

Wood Scion Is Fined $25 for Scorching

Son of Woolen Trust Head Pleads Guilty; Failed to Appear Last Week.

Charged with violation of the automobile speed law, William M. Wood, Jr., of Andover, son of President Wood of the American Woolen Company and a Harvard College sophomore, today pleaded guilty and was fined $25 by Judge Sears in the Salem District Court.

Preston Gibson, playwright, amateur actor and Washington society leader, was also fined $25 for overspeeding and $10 for operating an automobile without a license.

Young Wood has been a persistent violator of the auto laws.

Hamilton Fish, Jr., son of a New York financier and captain of the famous Harvard varsity football team in 1909, who was defaulted for non-appearance in court last week, was again absent when his case was called today. He is also charged with overspeeding. A letter from Fish stated that he had not received notification in time to be present today, but would be on hand next week.

Jack Johnson Will Become 'Frenchman'

"Best Interests of France Mine," Reads Petition.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—Through his counsellors, Jack Johnson, pugilist, who fled to France from the United States after he had been convicted in the latter country of white slavery, today filed declaration of his intentions to become a French citizen.

"The best interests of France in war or peace are my own," said the petition. Johnson is in London at present, having gone there for a theatrical engagement. His friends here say that he will never again return to the United States.

PRESIDENT IN CONGRESS GIVES MEXICO WARNING

We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once, and should assist them to get away in every way possible.

—PRESIDENT WILSON IN MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Emphasizing the fact that the United States must remain the firm friend of the people of Mexico in their present stress and trouble, President Wilson today read his long-awaited message on Mexican affairs to Congress.

The message was distinctly pacific in tone and contains little in the way of recommendation for future policy except the single one that THIS GOVERNMENT MUST URGE EARNESTLY THAT ALL AMERICANS SHOULD LEAVE MEXICO AT ONCE AND THAT THE UNITED STATES SHOULD ASSIST THEM TO GET OUT OF MEXICO IN EVERY WAY POSSIBLE.

"OUR FRIENDSHIP REJECTED"

The President counsels delay before further action is taken, and says:

"Impatience on our part would be childish and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the effort to bring order out of the confusion by friendly co-operative action, should fortunate occasion offer.

"So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization to the actual facts. We cannot thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances, and I believe that only a little

THAW "INTERVIEWS" HIMSELF AND DISCUSSES SOCIETY

PRISONER GIVES OUT ANOTHER REMARKABLE STATEMENT FROM SHERBROOKE JAIL

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 27.—When Thaw looked out from his cell today and saw a party of troopers patrolling the streets he was annoyed, but did not let it interfere with his literary labors. Here is the "interview" which Thaw wrote in his cell and then sent out by messenger to a representative of the AMERICAN. The oddity of the composition is apparent. As usual Thaw framed question and answer.

Q.—When you were in New York before you met Evelyn Nesbit, were you ever addressed as Harry? A.—No, and outside of Pittsburgh very few called me Harry.

Q.—Did no one?

Harry—I can think of only two exceptions. Mrs. Jack Leslie and the Hon. Norah Stirling used to call me Harry, the whole name being run together, but Captain Leslie and Mrs. Stirling's sons always addressed me by that name.

Q.—Have you always been good friends with Mrs. Leslie and Mrs. Stirling?

"Always the Best of Friends."

Harry—For a long time, but later I saw more of people with whom Mrs. Leslie was a little on the outs; but Mrs. Stirling and I have always been the best of friends.

Q.—That does not mean that there was any quarrel?

Harry—Oh, not really. Why, in 1902, when I was among people I knew in England, I took a house and one afternoon Mrs. George Keppel brought Mrs. Leslie, and nothing could have been more friendly. We all had a couple of tables for one game of bridge.

Q.—That is the Mrs. Keppel whose daughter was brought out last year according to the society cable news?

Harry—Yes, and she has the best disposition, and she has many friends and never lost one.

Q.—But no one else there called you Harry at any time?

Harry—No, the Pagets, Lord Lonsdale, the Ennezes, the Lurgans, H. W. Williams, the Plessen, the Ripons, the Molesworths, the Arlingtons, the St. Levans and the late Duchess of Manchester probably never knew I had cards, etc., with my full name Harry Kendall Thaw.

Q.—In Paris was Harry also used?

Knew but Few Viennese.

Harry—I don't remember any one, either of the French or of the colony (American colony), who ever called me Harry. And it was the same in Rome and Venice. I only knew a few people in Vienna, maybe 20 or 30, but they were all of the best company.

Q.—The season you were in New York did New Yorkers call you Harry?

Harry—No, as I said, I don't think of any one except when Captain and Mrs. Jack Leslie and I were together.

Q.—So no one in New York ever called you Harry?

A.—No one; but in Pittsburgh every one used to call me Harry.

Q.—Didn't you meet some of these New York men whom the district attorney there in 1908 admitted were a gang of debauchers in New York society?

Harry—No not exactly. Perhaps a few were asked to big balls. I don't think I ever saw Mr. Blank, nor Mr. Blank, nor Mr. Blank at dinner anywhere.

Q.—But you yourself did see some of them?

Having a Good Time.

Harry — Perhaps, but the only time was at a supper I was asked to. I did not care to go because I thought there would be strangers and all my friends and myself were having a useless but perfectly innocent good time.

Q.—What did you say when you were asked?

Harry—When a lady asked me to go I asked, "Why are you going? Why not give a supper yourself or let me give you one—that would be pleasanter?"

Q.—What did she say?

Harry—Oh, she told me she had promised and some others I know so there could be no change.

Q.—Did you then agree?

Harry—Oh, no, I asked why they had said she said it was a sort of turkey.

Q.—Did she mean a sort of Bohemian?

Respectable Party.

Harry—I suppose so. The party itself was wholly environment. At the time I knew nothing at all about it.

Q.—Did you go?

Harry—Not intentionally. Another lady asked me like the first one and said she was to invite a man.

Q.—Excuse me for interrupting, but isn't that sob odd way?

Harry—Oh, at first sight it seems an odd way, but it is the very best magic. Of course, one is extra careful only to bring a person who will fit in so it works out very well. For instance, suppose you are in Paris and some one thinks he or she would like to give a dinner at Le Tour d'Argent, but the good Maitre Frederick is dead. I am sorry to say. Well, the best or hostess will say to the guests, "Won't you come such a night and bring so-and-so," and you bring so and so, but if you don't find them bring another man or woman as the case may be, and it is all right.

Would Be Congenial.

"Well, suppose I am to ask a lady and cannot find her. I may see another friend of the hostess. But suppose I don't, but can see some friend of mine like the Countess Kleinmichel of St. Petersburg, of the Roman, of Joseph Potosky of Vienna or the Duchess of Grasiola or Mrs. Don Cameron of Washington or Lady Sarah Wilson or Lady Cunard and the hosts were like d'Uzes or de Contades. Well, most of these would know each other, but if not would be glad to dine together.

"So I would tell about the dinner and if disengaged the lady would come to the Tour d'Argent. It is perfectly comme il faut and it goes with an 'h. h.'"

Q.—Then that part of it was not lacking in dignity?

Harry—No perfectly good form.

Q.—How did you come to go?

Went to Rector's for Supper.

Harry—The night of the supper Craig Wadsworth and I were together. I don't remember whether he had dinner at the same house we had both been at the opera or what, but at midnight we had gone into a restaurant in New York city called Rector's.

Q.—You were often there, weren't you?

Harry—No, not at all. I was never there but twice in my life, and this was one of them—once, before the Autumn I met Miss Nesbit.

Q.—That was why you went more often to Rector's afterwards meeting Miss Nesbit.

Harry—It was not her fault in the least. She had the misfortune to be on the stage. Rector's was very good; I mean a well-managed restaurant.

Q.—So you gave up dinners, your friends, and went to Rector's and the Hotel Astor on her account?

Harry—Yes, she was naturally very good and nice.

Q.—To go, back to you and Mr. Wadsworth on one of these occasions?

Harry—We were talking when he said: "I've got to go to Mrs. X's for supper."

Q.—And you agreed?

Finally Decided to Go.

Harry—No, I said, "why not stop here a while and then go to bed? but he said, "I've promised to go and am going."

Q.—That caused you to go?

Harry—I said, "Well, I've been asked and did not promise to go but suppose I might as well go too."

Q.—You went to this supper?

Harry—Yes, and when we went into the room it seemed as though a certain lady in the place of honor was in a bad temper."

Q.—Who were there?

Harry—Near the door as I entered were a lot of people I knew, but on the other side of the table were a few that I did not know except one—a good natured New Yorker, now deceased.

Q.—Did you sit down with your friends?

Harry—In a way. I was sort of bowed along to the place of honor next the lady I have mentioned. Soon as I sat down I guessed why I was promoted so suddenly. They probably thought a newcomer might mollify her.

Q.—You saw her host?

Didn't Drink Anything.

Harry—Yes and bowed most politely and for a year afterwards I always felt willing to do something for him if the chance offered. I knew nothing about him and felt sorry for the way this lady had spoiled his supper. I never touched a thing either to eat nor drink, as I left after a minute.

Q. Why?

Harry—"Well I saw the lady was displeased. There were caviar dishes on the table and to make talk I said: 'May I have something to eat?'

Q. What happened then?

Harry—"The lady said: 'No you can't eat; the food isn't good.'"

Q. Were you surprised?

Harry—"I tried to help the supper party by one more effort, and then said: 'May I have a drink? Just by chance there was nothing on the table at the time."

Q.—What happened?

Harry—The host who was on the other side of the angry lady courteously said something about the waiters and rose and went toward what I supposed was the pantry. I did not see him return.

Q.—Why?

Harry—Well, I saw this lady was bent on a squabble and as I prefer cheerfulness I immediately decided on a retreat. Simply and solely to allow the lady to quarrel with somebody else.

Q.—How did you accomplish that manoeuvre?

Harry—The Hon. George Keppel sat beyond the other lady on my right, so I leaned over and remarked gently that "This isn't good enough; let's go."

Q.—Referring to the party or the belligerent attitude of the party of the first part?

Harry—Primarily to escape the lady. She would have brought Mr. Keppel into the dispute, too. We did not want to spoil the party, but we wanted to avoid the squabble.

Q.—So you never got a bite to eat nor a sup to drink?

Harry—Not a bite, not a sup. But it was nobody's blame, it was on account of the lady being angry.

Q.—Then you and Mr. Keppel went away with no supper at all?

Harry—Yes; that is, Mr. Keppel may have had something before I entered. The sad part was that while he and I were waiting for the elevator the whole crowd of those we knew filed out before us."

Q.—Did you like that?

Harry—Certainly not. I got cross and then asked: "Why not wait till we get away?" I did not know the man and did not wish to appear to have broken up his party.

Q.—Both had come out very quietly?

Harry—Yes; if the party had been s go they never would have noticed us.

Q.—But yours and Mr Keppel's friends made use of it as a signal?

Harry—Yes, and if I had known the host well enough I would have joked him and tried to make it up, but I did not want to seem in the slightest way rude to a stranger.

Q.—Did you keep this in mind?

A.—Oh, no it was not important but I recollected it afterwards.

Q.—May I ask if you believe New York society is immoral?

Harry—"You may ask, and I can tell you positively that it is not immoral at all."

Q.—Some have alleged that it is.

Harry—Either they did not know or were jealous. Working people behave themselves and so do wist are termed the "Hundred and fifty" in New York. There is no scandal; only gossip. You can't find a better model of the strongest respectability in the world than Mrs. Astor, is.

Q.—Well, New York society is useless?

A.—Well I used to think it was useless, but possibly it is really useful in that all the women are absolutely good and pure minded and of high ideals while the men are well behaved and clean minded.

THAW BRAINSTORM AS HE SEES SHERIFF DOGGING HIS STEPS

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 27.—While leaving court this morning Harry K. Thaw had one of his old brainstorm attacks. Noticing that Sheriff Hornbeck followed him, Thaw turned about and, pointing his finger at the sheriff, shrieked:

"Take him away. Call the officers and remove him. I don't want to look at him. He's after me and I want him removed. Go away, you; I won't have you near me; I don't want you to follow me. You get out of here. I shan't move. Officers, do your duty and remove that man."

Thaw was in a fearful rage. His voice broke and he almost frothed at the mouth. Sheriff Hornbeck did not seem inclined to go, and the officers led Thaw away, still in a high rage.

This is the first evidence today of his old paranoia which Hornbeck describes as a regular thing with Harry.

BORDER TOWN AIDS THAW IN ESCAPE PLANS

NORTON'S MILLS, Vt., Aug. 27.—When Harry Thaw comes here, and after his arrest, his first hearing will be given in the parlor of the Hotel Carpenter.

The hotel is so near the Canadian line that half of the dining room is actually in Canada.

If Thaw should get up in the parlor and walk six steps to a water pail on a bench by the dining room door, he would be back in Canada.

Whether Thaw's attorneys have discovered this fact and are hoping by utilizing it to cause further delay, is not known. The towns people here are all in the secret, although until the tale of Thaw's prospective trial here it had been forgotten.

Since Judge Globensky has ordered the hearing on the habeas corpus writ to go on today, it is probable that Thaw will be taken to Coaticook tonight, and perhaps brought on here. If he appeals to the Board of Inquiry at Coaticook he will be tried in an iron-barred room twelve feet square, above the railroad station.

Town is Excited.

His trial there will be held, and he will be sent on here directly.

Norton's Mills people—all fifteen hundred of them—have a self-conscious feeling as they wait for Thaw's arrival. For reporters have come here, and photographers, and the town has had more excitement in two days than in all its previous history.

There are four churches in town and one hotel. The trial of Thaw—Assistant Judge E. J. Nelson will preside—is to take place in this hotel. The hotel's divided dining room, with the Canadian line marked by a row of nails in the floor, enables Mr. Carpenter to sell liquor—with a license from the Canadian government. Norton's Mills is a "dry" town. Judge Nelson is assistant postmaster and head of the Baptist Church, and he promises Thaw a square deal. Thaw will be arrested and turned over to Sheriff Lee Rich of Averill, Vt., five miles from here. Then a warrant will have to be made out by Town Grand Juror Oliver H. Cameron of Norton's Mills, who is also a member of the School Board. Judge Nelson will give Thaw a hearing and then hold him over for the October high court at Guildhall, Vt., before Judges Waterman and Nelson. He will let Thaw out on bail here at Norton Mills.

PLAUDITS OF POPULACE TICKLE FUGITIVE, WHO IS GLAD HE WORE NEW SUIT.

guess the Canadians won't give me up. I am going to get a square deal at last."

"This is the limit," said Jerome, frankly. "You will excuse me if I do not comment upon the court's action. I still think Thaw must be released and that we shall be able to get him back to Matteawan, that's all."

Thaw left the courtroom with his attorneys and the jail officials. It was a triumphal progress. Men grasped his hands and women threw kisses at him. Harry was having the time of his life. As the carriage took him towards the jail he bowed and smiled and waved his hand to the people in the streets, who returned his greetings cordially.

"I'm so glad I had my new suit on today," he remarked.

At 9 o'clock the court will reconvene. The importance of the legal point upon which the discontinuance is asked cannot be overestimated.

Canadian Guards on Hand.

While Thaw laboriously toiled in his cell writing an interview on various subjects which concerned him, representatives of the Dominion government were stationing six members of the Canadian police about the jail to act as guards and as an escort for Thaw either when he was ordered produced in the courthouse or else started for the border.

In addition to these six uniformed and armed officers of the law five representatives of the department of immigration and four Canadian secret service men are on the ground. J. Parkinson, chief of the Canadian court service, is also here. Dr. Raymond E. C. Kieb, superintendent of the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminally Insane, from which Thaw escaped, has joined the forces which are fighting to get the fugitive back into that institution.

When the court room doors opened there were a hundred people waiting, including many ladies, and the benches for the public were instantly filled. The ladies who came late were given seats in the jury boxes. The men were told to come back some other day.

The six Dominion soldiers who are to pounce on Thaw if his counsel are incautious enough to allow him to be set at liberty took up conspicuous positions about the room. They wore clubs instead of bayonets and put on white gloves for the occasion. Their spitted helmets glistened in the sunlight and the ladies whispered, "Don't they look fine?"

Jerome Is "Held Up."

William Travers Jerome, with several New York and Vermont lawyers, entered the court room ten minutes before 10 and attempted to take seats within the railing. "You can't sit here," said the faithful guardian. "These seats are reserved for lawyers."

"We're lawyers," replied Jerome. "We're some of the best little lawyers who ever came up here."

The cursie desire for King's Councilors were speedily filled by loyal talent. In fact, Jerome counsel occupied nearly half the seats.

At 10 a. m. Thaw entered the court room. He was accompanied by Governor of the jail La Force and High Constable Mee.

Thaw was smiling and cheerful and waved his hand to Jerome.

The women tittered excitedly and Thaw let his eyes rove over the pretty faces.

Thaw Poses for Camera Men.

Just the same as if they were at home, bolder if anything, the newspaper photographers found their way in and boldly climbed right upon the judge's stand, resting their cameras upon the high desk. Fortunately the judge did not come in in time to catch them.

Thaw sat among his lawyers. He was not handcuffed. He was free and he seemed to appreciate his freedom. He posed with his lawyers for the photographers.

JEROME UNWILLING TO COMMENT ON ACTION BY COURT

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 27.—His voice ringing with sarcasm, William T. Jerome called the newspaper men together after the court, this morning, and in the presence of the Canadian lawyers hired to represent New York State made the following statement:

"We who represent New York in this matter are entirely unwilling to make any comment as to the scene which occurred in one of His Majesty's courts this forenoon. The relations between the bar of the United States and the Dominion is most intimate and friendly, and we realize keenly the humiliation of our professional brethren in Canada over such a scene. Mr. Jacobs, one of the leaders of the Canadian bar associated with us in the interests of New York State, is present, and we would prefer not to say anything in regard to the occurrence of this morning."

Asked if proceedings by the prosecution were possible today after court convenes this afternoon, Mr. Jerome said: "I hardly think it possible that there is lacking anywhere in His Majesty's dominion ample provision for dealing with this person and that there is lacking the proper means of bringing these provisions into action."

Mr. Jacobs said:

"The lawyers for the petitioners admitted we should have been heard before the court because they served notice on us to appear. The whole thing has been peculiar. I know of nothing like it occurring before. The outburst of enthusiasm when we were denied a hearing should have resulted in the courtroom being cleared. This is always done, but Judge Globensky seemed disinclined to take action."

Evelyn's Love Story---How Thaw Sought Girls of the Stage

POWER OF WEALTH DAWNED ON GROWING GIRL, THE BEAUTY OF PITTSBURGH

Chapter II.

"Michievel says virtue and riches seldom settle on one man."—Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy."

Seven years after Stanford White was born in New York city, a baby boy was born in Pittsburgh to Mr. and Mrs. William Thaw.

The father of this boy was a mechanic, but a veritable genius in foreseeing the possibilities of the iron and steel industries. He forced his way into that business, became a master in iron, coke and steel and swam in on the flood of Pittsburgh's wave of wealth to a golden shore.

William Thaw's wife, Mary Copley Thaw, was a sincere, church-going woman. As riches came to her husband grief came to her, because the elder Thaw became convivial and discontented with the simple home life that he had known as a wage-earning mechanic. The husband finally set up a separate home for himself in the down-town section of Pittsburgh. The shattering of the Thaw home life, combined with the influx of sudden wealth, had its effect upon the children.

The baby boy born to Mr. and Mrs. William Thaw in 1870 was one of their seven children and was named Harry Kendall Thaw. He became about everything that is condemned in the modern sons of the rich.

It would seem as though Fate has shaped the early life of Harry Thaw to create, for Fate's own arbitrary purposes in later years, an instrument with which to deal some rude and shocking blow to all society's footprints and perceptions. If such was Fate's deliberate purpose, then the work was superbly done.

All the time that Stanford White, the New York boy with a genius for architecture, was guiding his steps in education and development of his talents, Harry Thaw was swiftly laying the foundation for a career of waste, extravagance and folly.

When he was seventeen years old, Harry was a choice specimen of an undesirable youth. He had kept his parents and teachers constantly worried, tumbling from one scrape into another.

The worst thing about him was a lack of responsibility, combined with an arbitrary determination to have his own way at any cost.

Learning to smoke cigarettes was one of his youthful accomplishments. He did not incline to sports, except lawn tennis. He rapidly became a problem after he reached the adolescent stage.

When he was seventeen years old Harry was sent to Wooster, Ohio, University. He promptly became known there as "The Cigarette Fiend." His life at Wooster was a series of pranks. It must be said of him, however, that he was more useless than vicious then and he had the merit of standing by his companions when he had carried out some mischief involving others with himself.

His attitude toward the university authorities was a simple and scornful defiance of them all. He took it for granted that his father's riches warranted anything he did.

At one time, his school work being so poor, Thaw was called before President Scovel of the university.

"Thaw," said the master, "why don't you work harder? It is your mother's wish. Tell me, what branches of study do you intend to follow?"

"Oh, I've chosen all right, all right," said the gilded youth.

"And what, pray, may be your choice?" asked President Scovel.

"Penmanship and lawn tennis," said the young upstart, lighting a cigarette and strolling away.

The next thing for Harry Thaw to do, in the natural course of events, was to run away. But he planned no ordinary boy's harmless frolic, no healthy journey to work off youthful steam. Harry Thaw must do something worthy of a millionaire's son.

Liberally supplied with money, Harry ran away to Europe. He wired back home when he arrived, informing his distracted parents where he had gone and why. This was his silly message:

"Gone to Europe to get some cigarettes.—Harry."

The boy was gone a month. When he condescended to return he brought back with him a taste of Paris that later was to lure him back to that city with sharp speed.

So far as this European escapade was concerned, Harry Thaw "got away with it grand," as his would tell his boy friends. He was not over-chided. He was not even taken out of Wooster University. Both family and school suffered the scant grace to return.

With the edict of a flight across the way to increase his reputation as a regular man of the world, Harry branched into the next natural step in a rake's progress. He sought girls.

Obviously the girls for Harry Thaw were those of the stage. They were pretty. They were complaisant. They were more than willing to let him spend his father's money on them, and he was only too eager to do it.

The unblushing audacity of his school escapes characterized his ventures into feminine fields. He haunted the Wooster Hotel when theatrical troupes put up there. He was a first-nighter par excellence.

On one occasion all the chorus girls in a theatrical company appeared on the stage adorned with garters and bows fashioned of ribbon in the hues of Thaw's class colors. The theatre held many boys from Wooster University and the moment the suggestive decorations were seen every boy knew that this was another of Harry Thaw's intellectual triumphs.

Thaw "First Nighter" When He Met Evelyn

Obviously the girls for Harry Thaw were those of the stage. He was a first-nighter par excellence. On one occasion all the chorus girls in a theatrical company appeared on the stage adorned with garters and bows fashioned in the hues of Thaw's class colors.

—From "The Love Story of Harry Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit."

When Harry Thaw was fourteen years old—three years before he was sent to Wooster University—an interesting event occurred in Pittsburgh, his native place.

There was in Pittsburgh a lawyer named Winfield Scott Nesbit. He made barely enough to support his wife and their little boy, Howard. Mrs. Nesbit was a daughter of the South, known in her girlhood for her splendid figure and winsome face. In the Summer of 1884 the Nesbit family lived as economically as possible, for another child was expected. The coming little one would not be unwelcome, however, and the father and mother, basing a ten. hoped for a daughter.

Fall wore and Winter came and, on Christmas day itself, 1884, the child was born. It was a beautiful girl baby and the parents named her Florence Evelyn Nesbit.

Chapter III.

"Beautiful as sweet,
And young as beautiful, and soft as young,
And gay as soft, and innocent as gay!"
—Young's "Night Thoughts."

As a Christmas babe Florence Evelyn Nesbit—or Evelyn, as she was destined to be known—was dowered with woman's second greatest gift to unusual degree.

She was beautiful with a wondrous, appealing charm, one to attract as a child and to fascinate as a girl and woman.

She was of the brunette type, but her eyes were blue. They were like those orbs of which Browning wrote:

"Sweetest eyes were ever seen."

Though it must be confessed that Browning, to the delightful Evelyn, was a closed book.

The Nesbits lived in the Allegheny section of Pittsburgh. There Evelyn grew from a toddling baby to a schoolgirl, with her infantile grace not deserting her as she grew older, such as is often the case with "beauty children," but fulfilling its promise more and more as she came into her teens.

As Evelyn passed from grammar to high school age and her skirts were lengthened and her dainty figure rounded into lines, she was taught but a delight to the eye.

She was petite in form, so she never seemed to go through that lanky stage which is so trying to girlish dreams. Her skin was a combination of rare ivory and rose tints.

Her dark hair was soft and fine and glossy. Therefore it had that much desired quality of being manageable. She was envied by other girls, for her hair particularly, in that she "could do anything with it," as girls and women say.

Her features were small and regular, although her mouth was a trifle large in proportion to her nose and chin. But her mouth was well formed and her red lips parted in winsome smiles over perfect teeth.

Another gift was here—that of small, finely molded hands and feet. Her feet, particularly, were Trilby-like in their modelling, but smaller than those which Du Maurier described for his pathetic heroine.

Evelyn had natural mental gifts. That is, she was a "bright child," as they say. She was not studious. But she was keen and quick. She knew—as every girl knows—that beauty is a glorious thing to possess.

She knew that a pretty, sweet-mannered child receives more attention than a homely one, or a stiff, repellant one.

She realized, more and more as her years went on, that a winsome girl obtains more with a sweet glance from under long, fringed lashes, than with a scowl and a snarl.

She had a naturally appealing expression. This would change, in a flash, to a merry, bewitching smile. The combination, if style found, was irresistible among her fa[illegible] and chums.

Naturally pleasant and smiling, the child and the girl was a favorite at school and among her girlhood chums. She was petted and pretty and popular.

But Evelyn was poor, too. In Allegheny, suburb of Pittsburgh, one enjoys life as a child, if one has enough to eat and a pretty frock now and then, and a nickel or a dime to spend on childish fun.

But Evelyn went over to Pittsburg with her mother on occasional shopping trips. They saw the big stores, with their endless array of rustling silks, of glossy satins, of dainty linens and the thousand and one things which the sons of men manufacture for their women folks. Every little girl, old enough to while will be necessary. The circumstances are new.

WILSON READS MEXICO MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

"The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alterations in the whole aspect of affairs.

"The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed."

Supported by Other Nations.

President Wilson's message is unexpectedly brief and closes with the statement that several of the great governments of the world have given the United States their generous moral support in urging on the provisional authorities at Mexico City the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. The President relates the circumstances leading up to the Lind mission and all the facts in connection with its recommendations are less drastic and less coercive than was expected. The message follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

It is clearly my duty to lay before you very fully and without reservation the facts concerning our present relations with the republic of Mexico. The deplorable posture of affairs in Mexico I need not describe, but I deem it my duty to speak very frankly of what this government has done and should seek to do in fulfillment of its obligation to Mexico herself, as a friend and neighbor, and to American citizens, whose lives and vital interests are daily affected by the distressing conditions which now obtain beyond our southern border.

"Our Friendship Genuine."

Those conditions touch us very nearly, not merely because they lie at our very doors. That, of course, makes us more vividly and more constantly conscious of them, and every instinct of neighborly interest and sympathy is aroused and quickened by them; but that is only one element in the determination of our duty. We are glad to call ourselves the friends of Mexico, and we shall, I hope, have many an occasion, in happier times as well as in these days of trouble and confusion, to show that our friendship is genuine and disinterested, capable of sacrifice and every generous manifestation.

The peace, prosperity and contentment of Mexico mean more, much more, to us than merely an enlarged field for our commerce and enterprise. They mean an enlargement of the field of self-government and the realization of hopes and rights of a nation with whose best aspirations, too long suppressed and disappointed, we deeply sympathize. We shall get proof to the Mexican people that we know how to serve them without thinking how we shall first serve ourselves.

"Future Has Much in Store."

But we are not the only friends of Mexico. The whole world desires her peace and progress, and the whole world is interested as never before. Mexico lies at last where all the world looks on. Central America is about to be touched by the great waves of the world's trade and intercourse running free from ocean to ocean at the Isthmus.

The future has much in store for Mexico, as for all the States of Central America; but the best gifts can come to her only if she be ready and free to receive them and to enjoy them honorably. America in particular—America—North and South, and upon both continents—waits upon the development of Mexico and that development can be sound and lasting only if it be the product of a genuine freedom, a just and ordered government founded upon law. Only so can it be peaceful or fruitful of the benefits of peace.

Mexico has a great and enviable future before her, if only she choose and attain the paths of honest constitutional government.

The present circumstances of the republic, I deeply regret to say, do not seem to promise even the foundations of such a peace. We have waited many months, months full of peril and anxiety, for the conditions there to improve and they have not improved. They have grown worse rather. The territory in some sort controlled by the provisional authorities at Mexico City has grown smaller, not larger. The prospect of the pacification of the country even by arms has seemed to grow more and more remote, and its pacification by the authorities at the capital is evidently impossible by any other means than force.

Difficulties, more and more, entangle those who claim to constitute the legislative government of the republic.

They have not made good their claim in fact. Their successes in the field have proved only temporary. War and disorder, devastation and confusion seem to threaten to become the settled fortune of the distracted country. As friends we could wait no longer for a solution which every week seems further away. It was our duty at least to volunteer our good offices—the offer to assist, if we might, in effecting some arrangement which would bring relief and peace and set up a universally acknowledged political authority there.

Accordingly, I took the liberty of sending the Hon. John Lind, formerly Governor of Minnesota, as my personal spokesman and representative to the city of Mexico, with the following instructions:

Lind's Instructions.

"Press very earnestly upon the attention of those who are now exercising authority or wielding influence in Mexico the following consideration and advice:

"The government of the United States does not feel at liberty any longer to stand inactively by while it becomes daily more and more evident that no real progress is being made towards the establishment of a government at the City of Mexico, which the country will obey and respect.

"The government of the United States does not stand in the same case with the other great governments of the world in respect of what is happening or what is likely to happen in Mexico. We offer our good offices, not only because of our genuine desire to play the part of a friend, but also because we are expected by the Powers of the world to act as Mexico's nearest friend.

"We wish to act in these circumstances in the spirit of the most earnest and disinterested friendship. It is our purpose in whatever we do or propose in this perplexing and distressing situation not only to pay the most scrupulous regard to the sovereignty and independence of Mexico—that we take as a matter of course to which we are bound by every obligation of right and honor—but also to give every possible evidence that we act in the interest of Mexico alone and not in the interest of any person or body of persons who may have personal or property claims in Mexico which they may feel that they have the right to press. We are seeking to counsel Mexico for her own good and in the interest of her own peace, and not for any other purpose whatever.

"Offers Counsel and Aid."

"The government of the United States would in itself discredited if it had any selfish or ulterior purpose in transactions where the peace, happiness and prosperity of a whole people are involved. It is acting as its friendship for Mexico, not as any selfish interest, dictates.

"The present situation in Mexico is incompatible with the fulfillment of the international obligations on the part of Mexico, with the civilized development of Mexico herself, and with the maintenance of tolerable political and economic conditions in Central America. It is upon no common occasion, therefore, that the United States offers her counsel and assistance. All America cries out for a settlement.

"A satisfactory settlement seems to us to be conditional on:

"(A)—An immediate cessation of fighting throughout Mexico, a definite armistice solemnly entered into and scrupulously observed.

"(B)—Security given for an early and free election, in which all will agree to take part.

"(C)—The consent of General Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate for election as President of the republic at this election, and,

"(D)—The agreement of all parties to abide by the results of the election and co-operate in the most loyal way in organizing and supporting the new administration.

"The government of the United States will be glad to play its part in this settlement or in its carrying out which is honorable and consistent with the international right. It pledges itself to recognize and in every way possible and proper to assist the administration chosen and set up in Mexico in the way and on the conditions suggested."

Taking all the existing conditions into consideration, the government of the United States can conceive of no reasons sufficient to justify those who are now attempting to shape the policy or exercise the authority of Mexico in declining the offices of friendship thus offered. Can Mexico give the civilized world a satisfactory reason for rejecting our good offices? If Mexico can suggest any better way in which to show our friendship, serve the people of Mexico and meet our international obligations, we are more than willing to consider the suggestion.

Praise for Envoy.

Mr. Lind executed his delicate and difficult mission with singular tact, firmness and good judgment, and made clear to the authorities at the City of Mexico not only the purpose of his visit, but also the spirit in which it had been undertaken. But the proposals he submitted were rejected, in a note the full text of which I take the liberty of laying before you.

I am led to believe that they were rejected partly because the authorities at Mexico City had been grossly misinformed and misled upon two points. They did not realize the spirit of the American people in this matter, their earnest friendliness and yet sober determination that some just solution be found for the Mexican difficulties, and they did not believe that the present administration spoke, through Mr. Lind for the people of the United States.

"A Little More Time."

The effect of this unfortunate misunderstanding on their part is to leave them singularly isolated and without friends who can effectually aid them. So long as the misunderstanding continues we can only await the time of their awakening to a realization of the actual facts.

We cannot thrust our good offices upon them. The situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances; and I believe that only a little while will be necessary, for the circumstances are new. The rejection of our friendship makes them new and will inevitably bring its own alteration in the whole aspect of affairs.

The actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed. Meanwhile what is it our duty to do? Clearly everything that we do must be rooted in patience and done with calm and disinterested deliberation. Impatience on our part would be childish, and would be fraught with every risk of wrong and folly. We can afford to exercise the self-restraint of a really great nation which realizes its own strength and scorns to misuse it. It was our duty to offer our active assistance. It is now our duty to show what true neutrality will do to enable the people of Mexico to set their affairs in order again and wait for a further opportunity to offer our friendly counsels. The door is not closed against the resumption, either upon the initiative of Mexico or upon our own, of the

While we wait the contest of the rival forces will undoubtedly for a little while be sharper than ever, just because it will be plain that an end must be made of the existing situation and that very promptly; and with the increased activity of the contending factions will come, it is feared, increased danger to the non-combatants in Mexico as well as those actually in the field of battle.

The position of outsiders is always particularly trying and full of hazard where there is civil strife and a whole country is upset. We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once and should assist them to get away in every way possible, not because we would mean to slacken in the least our efforts to safeguard their lives and their interests, but because it is imperative that they should take no unnecessary risks when it is physically possible for them to leave the country. We should let every one who assumes to exercise authority in any part of Mexico know in the most unequivocal way that we shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who cannot get away and shall hold those responsible for their sufferings and losses to a definite reckoning. That can be and will be made plain beyond the possibility of a misunderstanding.

To Be Strictly Neutral.

For the rest, I deem it my duty to exercise the authority conferred upon me by the law of March 14, 1912, to see to it that neither side to the struggle now going on in Mexico, receive any assistance from this side of the border. I shall follow the best practice of nations in the matter of neutrality by forbidding the exportation of arms or munitions of war of any kind from the United States to any part of the republic of Mexico—a policy suggested by several interesting precedents and certainly dictated by many manifest considerations of practical expediency. We can not in the circumstances be partisans of either party to the contest which now distracts Mexico, or constitute ourselves the virtual umpire between them.

I am happy to say that several of the great governments of the world have given this government their generous moral support in urging upon the provisional authorities at the City of Mexico the acceptance of our proffered good offices in the spirit in which they were made. We have acted in the full view of our obligations to act as Mexico's nearest friend.

All the world expects us in such circumstances to act as Mexico's nearest friend and we shall act as her friend.

This is our moral relation to Mexico. There is nowhere any serious question that we have failed to perform in the case, or that we are acting in the interest of a fair settlement and good government, not for the promotion of some selfish interest of our own.

"Consent of Mankind."

If further motive was necessary than our own good will towards a sister republic and our own deep concern to see peace and order prevail in Central America, this consent of mankind to what we are attempting, this attitude of the great nations of the world towards what we may attempt in dealing with this distressed people at our doors, should make us feel the more solemnly bound to go to the utmost lengths of patience and forbearance in this painful and anxious business.

The steady pressure of moral force will before many days break the barriers of pride and prejudice down and we shall triumph as Mexico's friends sooner than we could triumph as her enemies—and how much more handsomely, with how much higher and finer satisfaction of conscience and of honor.

MEXICO'S REPLY TO WILSON'S PROPOSALS

In his reply to the American proposals Senor Gamboa, the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, urges the following points:

That President Wilson's imputation that no progress is being made toward the restoration of peace in Mexico is not true.

That the fact the Mexican government enjoys the recognition of nearly all the great nations of the world is proof that it is a true and honorable administration.

That the proposal of an armistice is impossible, because nations do not propose armistices with bandits. To grant an armistice would be to recognize the belligerency of the rebels.

That the request that General Huerta should not be a candidate for the presidency is "strange and unwarranted."

That the election of General Huerta was legal.

That the American proposals are "humiliating and unusual."

That Mexico's Ambassadors should be received in Washington, and that the United States should send a new Ambassador to Mexico.

Tan, Red or Freckled Skin Is Easily Shed

To free your summer-soiled skin of its redness, muddiness, freckles, blotches or tan, the best thing to do is to free yourself of the skin itself. This is easily accomplished by the use of ordinary harmless wax, which can be had at any drug store. Use at night as you use cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending surface skin begins to come off in fine powder-like particles, gradually the entire cuticle is shed, without pain or inconvenience. The second layer of skin now in evidence presents a spotless whiteness and sparkling beauty obtainable in no other way. I've heard so.

If the least tends to loosen and wrinkle your skin, there's an effective and harmless remedy you can readily make at home. Just let an ounce of powdered saxolite dissolve in a half-pint witch hazel and bathe your face in the liquid. This at once tightens the skin and smooths out the lines, making you look years younger.—Emily Coulson in Popular Monthly.—Adv.

MISS MABELLE FINLAY of Chelsea, who is to wed William M. Jones, whom she met at the Tufts Class Day dance.

Romance Began on Tufts' Class Day

William M. Jones, '12, to Wed Miss Mabelle Finlay of Chelsea.

Growing out of an introduction at a Tufts College class day hop, the engagement has been announced of Miss Mabelle Finlay of Chelsea to William Mosher Jones, Tufts, '12, by Mrs. James L. Finlay, mother of the bride-to-be.

The ceremony will be performed early in October in Goddard Chapel, Tufts College, and will be attended by the friends of Miss Finlay and class mates of Mr. Jones.

Mr. Jones lives at No. 16 Rockland street, Swampscott, and is a structural engineer for the New England Construction Company of Everett.

Salvationists Try to Convert Thaw

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 27.—The Salvation Army is now trying to take a hand in the Thaw mixup. The local Salvation officials have received instructions from the head office in London to go after Thaw, save his soul and add him to the ranks of the army.

Accordingly, Captain William Gay and his adjutant approached the sheriff yesterday, showed the cablegram and received permission to go to the jail and send in a request to Thaw for an interview.

Thaw replied that he could not see them then, but perhaps later.

The two officers then moved off.

Court Order for Thaw Medical Brief

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—A court order has been granted directing that a medical brief of Dr. Britton D. Evans, now in the custody of Commissioner Gilchrist, be delivered to Dr. Austin Flint for use in proceedings against Harry Thaw in Vermont or New Hampshire.

LOVE DRAMA OF EVELYN AND HARRY THAW

walk, feels the thrill of appreciation and the longing to possess these beautiful things. It is born in love.

Some wise philosophers (men of course) have reasoned out that a pretty girl does not need pretty clothes so much as a plain girl does, because her beauty will glorify the commonest attire.

As a point of philosophy, this is doubtless well taken. But no pretty girl since the days of the Athenian maids who first bought Tyrian robes and handwrought jewelry, ever saw any sense in that way of dressing.

A pretty girl dresses just as fine clothes as a plain girl and more so, if anything.

Fashion was becoming more and more of a controlling factor in Pittsburgh. Iron masters were wrenching ore and coal from the earth and transmitting it into gold wherewith to build gaudy mansions, loaded their tables with Lucullan feasts and decked their wives and daughters in Fifth avenue garments.

Evelyn Nesbit, her girlish beauty set in home-made frocks and hats, saw these costly garments, studied them and knew to the last degree just how much they would enhance her own charms. It took no great perception for her to know how well dainty garments would become her that.

In Pittsburgh, too, there was life—real LIFE to the pretty little poor girl from over the Allegheny side. Ironmasters' money was making ironmasters' merriment. Some of this blossoming amusement in the city of smoky wealth was crude—like pig iron—and some of it was as refined as tempered steel. But, whatever form of fun and frolic and extravagance and dissipation it was—it was life and gayety.

Of course, Evelyn Nesbit, growing up in Allegheny, realized as she entered maidenhood that life with money is as different from life without it as buttered bread is different from the unbuttered article.

She could see what money did. She could read it in the papers. She could see it in the store windows and in the rows of costly motors and in the raiment of the wives and daughters of the ironmasters.

Evelyn would meet a laughing, chatting group of rich, fashionably dressed girls of her own age, and she could tell herself with all truth: "If I had their clothes I would be prettier than any of them."

At that, Evelyn was prettier than the average child of wealth in Pittsburgh, no matter what clothes she wore. An artist would note her form, coloring, grace and winsome expression, and would call it natural beauty, without regard to clothing.

And that is just what artists did—at least those painters in the world of art who use the camera and the sensitized plate for their brush and canvas. For Evelyn Nesbit, from childhood, was a rare model for photographers.

(To Be Continued Thursday.)

Woman Made from Backbone, Not Rib

Chicago Suffrage Orator Ridicules Biblical Statement.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 27.—If it is true that woman was made out of man, it is more probable she was forced from a section of backbone rather than from a rib, according to Mrs. Jessie Hardy Stubbs, a Chicago suffrage debater visiting here. Mrs. Stubbs said:

"Read in the first chapter of Genesis, not the second, you will find God created man, male and female at the same time. But they have taken the second chapter, since all the preachers have been men and the story has influenced the ages."

Even the Igorottes Can Learn Baseball

Head Hunter's Son Calls Umpire "Thief and Robber."

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—So far has baseball penetrated into foreign countries, that even a little Igorotte boy, Franklin Dalhat, eleven year-old son of a head hunter chief, who has arrived here, knows the game.

"What do you call the umpire?" he was asked.

"Thief, sometimes, but robber, mostly," he answered.

ELOPING BRIDE SAYS ALL HOTELS SHOULD SUPPLY MINISTERS

Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Wandel. The bride before her elopement was Miss Eloise Rowe.

A clergyman should be a regular feature of every properly constituted hotel, according to Mrs. Kurt Wandel, who is today in New York with her husband. After having been the heroine of an automobile elopement.

Mrs. Wandel was Miss Eloise Rowe, daughter of Mrs. C. A. Bennett, of Denver. She was engaged to marry Wandel on October 1, but both thought that too long to wait. So they slipped away in an auto and were wed.

"We had such trouble getting a clergyman," said the bride to an AMERICAN reporter as she slipped her hand through her husband's arm, "that I think every good hotel should have one constantly on hand. A minister is just as important to society as a doctor, and there should be just as many of them and they should be just as accessible."

The bride was visiting her sister in Garden City, L. I., when she decided to elope and go to Boston after a wedding trip.

After holding up an auto and begging a ride to New York, it was arranged that the Rev. Dr. Houghton of the Little Church Around the Corner, would perform the ceremony.

Mr. Wandel is a resident of Boston and manager and head salesman of the Wandel Screen Company, in which Charles Sumner Bird has the controlling interest.

Cummins Urges G.O.P. Peace Meeting

Would Unite Progressives, He Says, with "Conservatives."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Senator Cummins has addressed to Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican National Committee, a suggestion that a meeting of all the elements of the Republican party be held shortly to agree upon the place and date for a convention at which a reorganization shall be attempted.

At a meeting held by Progressives and "Conservatives" last Spring, it was agreed another meeting should be held. Cummins has written to Hilles in an effort to carry out this agreement.

Chicago Caravels for Columbus Day

A feature of the Columbus Day celebration in Boston on October 12 will be the presence in the Charles River Basin of Chicago's reproductions of Columbus' caravels. The vessels are to be sent first to the San Francisco exposition by way of the Panama Canal. A float depicting the landing of the Pilgrims will appear in the historical pageant. The Third order of Pilgrim Fathers will stage this feature.

WOODBERRY DENIES HEART BALM CHARGES

Henry J. Woodberry of No. 58 Hunnewell avenue, Roxbury, makes a sweeping denial of the allegations made by Miss Margaret C. Clarke, a Back Bay young woman, in her $25,000 heart balm suit, in his answers to her interrogatories which he has just filed in the Superior Court. He declares:

He never asked her to marry him.

He never introduced her to anyone as his fiancee.

He never called on her three or four times a week from the time he met her until 1912.

He never gave her a ring.

He always avoided any discussion of marriage.

Woodberry admits he has known Miss Clarke for the past seven years and has called at her home but is unable to recall the specific number of times he visited her, although he does remember he had the key to the front door of her home for one week, and during that occasion called upon her twice.

Woodberry says that while he knew a Miss Cunningham and had talked with her on "irrelevant and immaterial matters," he never asked her to intercede with Miss Clarke for him. He declares that while Miss Cunningham said to him she thought he and Miss Clarke were engaged, he told her he had no intention of marrying Miss Clarke.

Firemen in Peril at Gasoline Blaze

Damage of $2,000 Done in Tremont Street Explosion.

Firemen were in great peril early today fighting a blaze in Smith Brothers' paint shop at No. 1179 Tremont street. The fire started from an explosion of gasoline. Other explosions followed.

The tenements blocks adjoining were threatened, several of the tenants moving portions of their belongings to the street. The damage was placed at $2,000.

Urge Carroll for Port Collector

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Byron R. Newton, secretary to Secretary McAdoo, today authorized the denial that James J. Storrow had been offered the position of Collector of the Port of Boston.

William Taylor of East Boston has become an active candidate. The name of Samuel H. Hudson has also been persistently mentioned. Congressman Curley wants John F. McDonald of Boston accepted as a compromise candidate.

Renewed interest in the contest developed today in the receipt of a letter by the Treasury Department suggesting Francis M. Carroll as a compromise candidate for the collectorship.

B. H. Whitney for Optometry Board

Bernard H. Whitney of Dedham was today nominated by Governor Foss to serve on the Board of Registration in Optometry, succeeding Charles J. Collins, of South Boston. The name of Charles L. Hilliard of Pittsfield was sent in for the approval of the Governor's council, to succeed the late Charles E. Burke, justice of the Central Berkshire district.

The Governor failed to nominate for the vacancy on the excise commission board, though it is understood that George M. Harlow, the Governor's political secretary, is slated for that position. Neither was there any nomination for the Public Service Commission.

The council postponed for another week action on the Port Directors' plan to take a strip of land between Maverick street and Wood Island park, East Boston.

John D. Plays Golf with Deaf Delegates

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27.—Following a game of golf, to which John D. Rockefeller challenged two delegates at the national convention of the deaf here, the oil king invited all the delegates to make use of his grounds. He said he admired the deaf who had "made good." An honorary membership badge was given him.

Governor's Day at Barnstable Fair

TAMMANY RASCALITY IS LEADING ISSUE, DECLARES HEARST

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The following statement by William Randolph Hearst was received from San Francisco by telegraph:

Mr. Mitchel is right. The issue of this campaign is not merely the subway question.

The issues are political rascality, political dishonesty, political treachery and perjury.

Tammany is a leading issue because of Tammany rascality, Tammany dishonesty and Tammany treachery to the public interests.

Tammany rascality is a blot on our political system; so is all other political rascality.

Tammany dishonesty should be cut ruthlessly out of our public life; so should all other public dishonesty.

Tammany perjury and repudiation of solemn pledges, Tammany treachery to the people's interests should be soundly and severely punished; so should all other public perjury and the betrayal of the people's rights.

A rascal is a rascal whether he is a Tammany rascal or a reform rascal.

A perjurer is a perjurer whether he repudiates his pledges at the instance of a venal Tammany boss or at the instigation of plundering Wall Street magnates.

A traitor to the public interest is a traitor no matter whether he betrays the people for the benefit of a corrupt political machine or for the advantage of a corrupt and corrupting public service corporation. I have opposed and intend to continue to oppose Tammany rascals and all other rascals.

I am opposed to traitors who have betrayed the public and also I am unrelentingly adverse to politicians who secured their election through my efforts who made protestations to political principles which they did not possess, who made promises of public purposes which they did not perform.

I and my friends elected Mr. McAneny and Mr. Prendergast. I added one hundred and sixty thousand votes to what the fusion ticket was able to collect and put these gentlemen in office. I did not do this because of Mr. McAneny's exuberant pink whiskers nor because of Mr. Prendergast's Chesterfieldian manners.

Did Not Want Office.

I did it because of their pretended principles and professed intentions.

I did it from motives of purest public interest. I did not want to run for office. I did not want either to be elected or to be defeated. I did not covet either the applause or the abuse of a campaign. I did not believe that I could secure by public justice or gratitude. I merely hoped that the city and citizens would be benefited by the election of a honest ticket. I made the fight in that hope and I based the hope on the positive and repeated public pledges of Mr. Mitchel, Mr. McAneny and Mr. Prendergast.

Mr. Mitchel kept his pledge and Mr. McAneny and Mr. Prendergast broke theirs. Mr. Mitchel has proved himself a faithful public servant; Mr. McAneny and Mr. Prendergast have proved themselves faithless as public officials and unworthy and untrustworthy as individuals.

Whether or not the subway question is an issue in this campaign, political honesty and personal responsibility are issues in every campaign.

Mr. McAneny and Mr. Prendergast repudiated their former pledges at the instance of and in the interest of powerful privilege-seeking corporations.

How do the voters know that these gentlemen will not repudiate their present pledges at the instance of the same corporations or of equally evil influences?

The only way for the people to secure faithful public service is to remember and reward faithful public servants.

Punish Public Traitors.

The only way for the people to prevent unfaithful public service is to punish proven public traitors. Consider the parable of the faithful and unfaithful stewards and act according to the scriptural injunction: "To him that hath shall be given and from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

Great criminal corporations in politics for plunder are chief causes and the main beneficiaries of corruption in our public life. These powerful and unscrupulous institutions, seeking privileges, stealing franchises, debasing government, maintain Tammany Hall and seek to control the opposition to Tammany Hall and to introduce into reform movements the steel pigeon of their selfish interest.

Our politics will never be purged until they are freed from this malign influence. If the people in rebellion against corporation domination intend to vote against McCall, how can they fail to also vote against McAneny and Prendergast, equally the agents of these greedy corporations and equally rewarded with commission for their public betrayal and their corporation service?

My stance is honest. I intend to assail all public traitors, all corporation mercenaries, no matter under what banner the scarlet livery of their shameful service may be found.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

What Telegraph Operator Has Seen Longest Service?

Is It Margaret J. Nutter?

Margaret J. Nutter.

Miss Margaret J. Nutter of No. 10 Peabody street, Newton, for the past ten years manager of the telegraph office at the South Station, is mentioned to the AMERICAN as a candidate for the honor of being the oldest telegraph operator in the service.

Miss Nutter began as an operator in 1871 and was promoted to the position of manager of the Western Union office in Portsmouth, N. H., in September, 1872. She has since served as manager of the offices at Lynn and Haverhill.

The AMERICAN will give $25 to the discoverer and an equal amount to the operator sought.

The contestants must be in active service now.

Replies must all be in by Friday, August 29.

Mothers' Day at Franklin Park

5,000 Parents with Children at Big Event Tomorrow.

The first Mothers' Day and municipal picnic of the city of Boston, at Franklin Park, tomorrow, is expecting to attract 5,000 mothers and their children from different sections of the city. The supply of tickets has been exhausted. Mayor Fitzgerald planned to have the issue limited to those who have not had a vacation outside the city. Over 2,000 children from fifty-two play grounds will give their annual exhibition, open on the Playstead at 2:30 without requiring tickets.

A baby exhibit will be a feature of the picnic at 10:30 a. m., near the river bank. A Punch and Judy show, magic, story telling, auto rides and free refreshments will be given.

Tie Up Your Money If You Mail It

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Picking up loose money has grown to be such a hardship for the overworked rural free delivery carriers that the Postoffice Department today issued an order warning reckless citizens against leaving loose coins lying around. Hereafter coins must be tied in bundles or enclosed in envelopes whenever the patron of a rural route wants stamps from a carrier and leaves the necessary amount in the wayside box.

Body Found Near Railroad Track

TILTON, N. H., Aug. 27.—The nude body of a man with the head severed was found beside the railroad track on the Mountain Division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, between Belmont and Tilton, by the crew of an express train early today. Three tramps who were asleep in the vicinity were arrested for drunkenness and an effort was made to learn the identity of the dead man.

DeLancey Nicoll, Jr., Weds in Secret

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—An elopement that included an automobile trip of thirty miles and a marriage which had been kept secret for almost three months were disclosed today when DeLancey Nicoll, Jr., son of the lawyer and Democratic politician, and Miss Alma C. Rose of Monmouth Beach, N. J., confessed to the young man's father that they had been married at Freehold, N. J., on June 11.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRIGEN.

One family in every thirteen in the United States is taking its pleasure in a Ford car; or, rather, on the basis of the number of Ford cars in use, every sixty-seventh family should have a car. Some of them haven't got them because of the families that have more than one car, because of those which have been turned into commercial cars and the ones used in public work. But there are enough of them in existence to give a car to one person in each 300 in the country.

The number of Fords in use today is approximately 325,000. Of this multitude 300,000 are in the United States. The population, according to the last census, was 92,000,000. It is easy to compute from this that one person in every 306 has a Ford car. Getting down to the family proposition, the official multiple for figuring the average number of people in a family is 4.53, which gives the fact that one in every sixty-seven families owns a Ford car.

Manager V. A. Charles of the Inter-State Automobile Company of this city, announces that on October first he will move into his new salesroom at No. 618 Commonwealth avenue. His present headquarters at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Harland street, are too cramped to combat the growing business of this concern, and Manager Charles is following the crowd in going out to Commonwealth avenue.

In the new salesrooms he will have space enough to exhibit all of his latest models as well as used cars. Later on a new service station will be built directly in back of the Commonwealth avenue salesroom on Cunnington street.

A Cadillac seven-passenger touring car played a not inconsequential part in a closing act of the Texas drama in which the Lone Star State bested the Standard Oil octopus, the automobile being used as Austin for the pleasant test of transporting the $500,000 penalty to the State coffers.

The Standard Oil's fine was paid in cash, $450,000 being in currency and $50,000 in gold. The money was loaded into a Cadillac belonging to Morris Hirshfield, cashier of the Austin National Bank. Then W. T. Folts, vice-president of the bank, Assistant Attorney-General Sweeton and Carnien and Captain J. M. Fox of the State Ranger service, climbed into the car and made a rapid run to the Capitol. The cash was placed in a telescope grip and a suit case, having been drawn from a $500,000 deposit placed to the credit of the Austin bank in the National City Bank of New York.

AMBULANCE FOR MOTORMAN

Suffering From Sciatica for Years, Tells of His Recovery by New Remedy, Var-ne-sis

Suffering so intensely from sciatica rheumatism that the ambulance was called and he was taken to the city hospital, was the experience of Elliott W. Briggs, a well-known motorman. He says:

"I suffered for four years from rheumatism and sciatica and one day was taken with a severe attack so that I was taken to the hospital and remained there for weeks. The doctors gave me very little encouragement of a permanent cure and I was discouraged, as I had tried about everything. At times the pain from my hip and down my leg was terrible, especially when I would sit down for awhile and attempt to get up. After walking it seemed to be much better but I could get no relief from anything. I tried all kinds of remedies, including electric and massage treatment, but nothing reached the spot. I had been reading a lot about this Var-ne-sis and at last tried it with very little faith; to my amazement it began to help me in a short while and in a few weeks I could bear my full weight on my lame leg.

"It not only helped my rheumatism, but helped my stomach as well. I had been troubled with a bad stomach and constipation, due, I suppose, to the large amount of medicine I had taken for relief. Today I am absolutely free from a pain or an ache and weigh over 200 pounds, and live at 54 Brook street, Providence, R. I."

It is claimed that Var-ne-sis is purely vegetable, and does not contain the ordinary drugs given for stomach trouble or rheumatism. There is no salicylate of soda, potassium, iodides, wintergreen or anything to kill pain. It simply gets the stomach, kidneys, liver and blood in good condition, so that the cause is removed and the poisons are thrown off. Address W. A. Varney, Lynn, Mass., for newspaper devoted to rheumatics.

This will be the last week to consult the rheumatic specialists at Riker-Jaynes, 50 Washington and Hanover streets.

FOSS BLOCKED BY GARDNER'S BIG 'BARREL'?

The latest "real reason" why Governor Foss is not a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor was unlimbered today. The gist of it is that the Governor doesn't care to spend as much money as a successful campaign against Congressman Gardner would require.

The story, as the Republicans tell it, runs thus:

At first it looked easy to Foss, with only Benton out for the Republican nomination. Foss let it be understood that he would run.

Then came Congressman Gardner's entry. Gardner is very rich, with Senator Lodge, his father-in-law, back of him. Gardner is a spender and goes in to win.

While the Governor was thinking this over two young men, shrewd Republicans, came to the Governor. They said to him: "Governor, you don't want to run for the Republican nomination for Governor. You don't even want to run independently for re-election.

"If you do it, we are authorized to tell you that it will cost you at least $10,000 and you may not get elected then.

You know Gardner. He's got money to spend. He'll spend it. He'll make you spend more than you ever spent before—and then some. Think it over and drop out.

The Republicans say that the Governor thought it over, it is said, and a letter was sent pleading to him and so his papers were not filed for the nomination contest.

Now, say the Republican racesusers, he won't run independent, either. There'll be no Foss papers on October 7.

Mrs. Irene Carley Sues for Divorce

Her Wedding in 1905 Was Notable Society Event.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Mrs. Irene Howard Carley, a leader of beautiful and a favorite in New York and Albany society, has sued her husband, Francis C. Carley. Mr. Carley is a member of the New York Stock Exchange and a brother of Mrs. Oliver Harriman.

The Van Cortlandt Hotel and last July are mentioned, but no other person is named in the papers. Mr. Carley asks for the custody of their child, seven years old, but she demands no alimony. Her father, the late T. Howard King, left an estate of about $1,000,000.

Aviator Hawker's Airship Disabled

DUBLIN, Aug. 27.—With 1,048 miles of his 1,860-mile flight around Great Britain behind him, Aviator H. G. Hawker met with mishap ten miles from this city today. One of the wings of his hydro-aeroplane broke under the strain to which it had been put and Hawker said he feared he would not be able to reach Southampton, Eng., in time to get the $25,000 prize. Hawker was injured in the fall of his machine.

REP. LEO F. M'CULLOUGH OF SOUTH BOSTON.

This is one of the so-called "Democratic" members of the Legislature who believes that party pledges are to be forgotten as soon as election day is over. The Democratic party last Fall opposed the Western Trolley Bill in no uncertain terms when it said: "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY THE STEAM RAILROADS, AND BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH."

Yet Mr. McCullough ignored this solemn pledge and voted for the Western Trolley Merger Bill in spite of the warnings of the Tax Commissioner and the Railroad Commission, representing the official railroad experts of the State, and in spite of the pleadings of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Public Franchise League and the Boston Real Estate Exchange, which as representatives of Massachusetts business interests knew that this bill could do them nothing but injury, and of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which represents our national government on railroad matters.

If you believe that this man ought to be retired into private life please send us your name and address. We will not publish it.

Boys Must Fix Up Door They Carved

Calvin R. Batchelder and Haywood L. Cating, fourteen, of Wakefield, this afternoon got sandpaper, putty and varnish to carry out the sentence imposed upon them today by Judge Bruce in Malden Court. They were found guilty of carving their initials on the door of the Greenwood schoolhouse, Wakefield. The boys must sandpaper the door, put putty in the apertures made by them, and varnish the door.

CASSIDY SHOWS IMPORTANCE OF PURE DRINKS

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Most of us are too prone to consider that anything bought with a nickel isn't of so much importance anyway. We get a poor drink of soda and we say, "Well, all I got stuck for was a nickel."

We hear of soda water and other soft drinks being doped in various ways, and we let it pass as only of a nickel's worth of importance.

But did you ever stop to think of the immense amount of money spent yearly, the immense business built up on the nickel basis?

Experts figure our expenditure for soda water during the year 1911 totalled at least $500,000,000. The total business of 1912 will probably exceed that estimate by many hundreds of thousands.

The famous billion-dollar Congress disbursed only twice that sum for running the entire government. When figures get as large as that, we can only grasp their significance by means of comparison.

For $500,000,000 we could buy fifty dreadnoughts. For $500,000,000 we could almost keep our nation in shoes for a year.

This amount means more than $5 per capita for every man, woman and child in the United States.

For $500,000,000 we could send 100,000 boys through college.

It is said this amount of money would wipe out the entire church indebtedness of the United States five times over.

If $500,000,000 goes to buy soda water every year, then the soda water business is no trifling affair. And anything that acts to adulterate our soft drinks is a matter of vital importance. Impure soda water is responsible for much of the sickness during the hot months. Fancy for yourself what must be the total amount of sickness caused by adulteration in the expenditure of $500,000,000 annually, each cent of sickness being caused by a nickel.

Allow for the majority of soda water being purely made and purely served. The possibilities of sickness would make the figures appalling.

Return to Editor of Swimming Carnival, Boston American, 80 Summer St., Boston.

Attention, swimming girls!

Entries for the AMERICAN'S Swimming Carnival for girls, to be held in the Charles River Basin on Saturday, from 2 to 6 p. m., close today at 5 p. m.

More than seventy girls have entered their names, and many more are expected to register today.

The carnival is free to all. It is gotten up not alone to arouse interest in swimming and aquatic sports, but to popularize the Charles River Basin, where mothers may bring their little ones to enjoy the refreshing breezes.

The AMERICAN has the co-operation and approval of the Metropolitan Park Commission and the assistance of Superintendent Herbert W. West of the Metropolitan Park police. Superintendent West has detailed Lieutenant Albert Chapman to take charge of the police arrangements.

The arrangements for the race are in the hands of the Swimming Editor. The course mapped out by him is the one from the Arsenal along the Boston side of the Charles River lower basin, between the Union Boat Club landing and the Harvard bridge.

Letter from Miss Friedburg.

The following letter from Cecilia Friedburg speaks for itself:

Editor of Swimming Carnival:

In reply to your invitation to swim on August 30, would say that I appeared at one of the theatres at Revere Beach this Summer and received a salary for same, which, of course, settles me as an amateur. I am at your service to help make the carnival a success and would give an exhibition of diving and swimming or am willing to compete with Rose Pitonof and Marion Gibson in an exhibition one mile race.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) CECILIA FRIEDBURG.

Miss Lena Mowles, a seventeen-year-old Dorchester girl, is one of the latest to enter the AMERICAN'S big swimming carnival. Miss Mowles belongs to the Tuxen Swimming Club and is confident she will make a creditable showing. She said:

"I hope to win. I realize that it is the biggest race of its kind and I will try my best to finish first. I recently swam from Savin Hill to City Point, which is about three and a half miles, in 2 hours 10 minutes.

"I depend upon a break and overhand stroke while swimming. I am planning to try the Boston Light swim next year."

New entries just received include:

Langford Knocks Out Flynn at Atlas A. A.

'Ho Ho" Stops West End Heavyweight in Four h Round of One-Sided Bout

By JACK CONWAY.

"Porky" Flynn proved no match for Sam Langford in their bout at the Atlas A. A. last night and was knocked out in four rounds. The knockout blow landed just before the bell sounded for the end of the fourth session. The West End heavyweight was in such poor condition after "Ho Ho" had landed the dream wallop that Referee Jack Sheehan halted the contest shortly after Flynn struck the canvas. He realized that Flynn would be unable to continue fighting in the fifth chapter.

The bout was witnessed by close to 6,000 people. It had aroused a tremendous amount of interest in sporting circles, but it was too one-sided to keep the fans on edge. Flynn proved a joke after the first round, while Langford did not show as well as was expected. The "Tar Baby" was very slow on his feet and missed many punches. His chief asset is his ability to punch.

Flynn did his best work in the first round when he outpointed Langford. In this session the West End favorite knocked Langford to the mat with a terrific left hand felt. Sam regained his feet like a flash but was dazed for a few seconds.

Flynn Used Poor Judgment.

If Flynn had used a little footwork and depended upon a left hand punch, he would probably not have been knocked out. He scored repeatedly with a left jab in the first session, but after that round he resorted to a great deal of stalling and Langford experienced very little difficulty in scoring with right and left hand punches to the head and body.

Langford weighed 186 pounds last night. This is sixteen pounds more than he weighed when he last fought in this city. The extra weight has not done the Cambridge negro any good. It has slowed him up, and if he is wise he will reduce to 170 or 175 pounds before clashing with Joe Jeanette.

Enthusiasm was rampant among the fans from the time the bout started. Flynn was the first boxer to enter the ring. He was followed by a small-sized army of seconds.

Langford crawled through the ropes a few minutes after Flynn. He wore a large green kimono and had enough advisers to care for three or four bouts.

Maffitt Flaherty was originally scheduled to referee the bout, but Langford objected to him and after consulting with his manager, Joe Woodman, and the management of the club that he would not fight unless Jack Sheehan refereed.

We do not know any reason why Langford should have objected to Flaherty as referee. The big Revere life guard may not be the greatest referee in the world but he knows the boxing game and is competent and honest. If Flynn's manager were a "live wire" he would have objected to Flaherty's being ousted from the ring.

"Porky" Towered Over Sam.

The men started boxing at a fast pace in the first round. Flynn towered over Langford by over six inches and was in excellent physical condition. The "Tar Baby," on the other hand, was fat and not very fast on his feet.

The heavyweight from the West End would jab with his left hand and then fall into a clinch. As the men had agreed not to hit in the clinches, Sam was unable to return "Porky's" blows. He tried to stop Flynn by hauling a "haymaker," but the majority of his punches failed to reach the mark.

Just before the round ended, Flynn soured with a snappy left jolt to Langford's jaw and the Cambridge terror went to the mat, but was on his feet like a flash and fighting strong.

Flynn appeared nervous when he came from his corner at the opening of the second session. He did not seem to have any confidence in his own ability to hold Langford at bay and when Langford started to swing wildly with right and left hand punches Flynn stalled around the ring. This made it easy for Sam to batter Flynn on the kidneys and that weakened the West End man.

Langford was not rushing the fight and was evidently trying to end the battle by landing a "haymaker." Near the end of the round he sent Flynn to the mat for the count of nine.

Langford piled up a big lead in the third stanza and it was obvious that Flynn was a beaten man. It was only a question of time when he would seek a soft spot on the canvas.

"Lee all the exits when the bout is over!" This announcement was made by Benny Ostheus just before the bell sounded for the opening of the fourth round. All of which proves that Benny knows a few things about the boxing game.

Langford rushed at Flynn when the fourth round started and hit the West End heavyweight at will. He landed a terrific right hand punch on Flynn's jaw in the latter part of the round and the name of Daniel Flynn was then added to the long list of hopeless "hopes."

Good Preliminary Bouts.

The preliminary bouts were better than the average. Teddy Murphy of this city outpointed Joe Quinn of Cambridge in the opening contest of the evening. This was a spirited whirl.

Quinn outweighed Murphy by a few pounds and is also taller than Teddy. The latter, however, is a veteran and his ring generalship enabled him to win with the decision by a wide margin.

There was no question about the winner of the next contest. It was between Joe Child, of Fall River and Jimmy Krause, who hails from dear old Philadelphia. Chick fought a slashing battle and landed a sleep punch in the fifth round.

"Young" Jasper of Boston outpointed Andy Cortes of Brooklyn in the other preliminary. This "go" went the limit of eight rounds.

MANY ATHLETES IN WORCESTER TRACK GAMES

By T. J. HALPIN.

J. Fred Powers, who has charge of the Worcester Fair track events, has secured the entries of some of the greatest athletes in the country for his meet which will be held under electric lights on the evening of September 3.

This meet has grown in importance to such an extent that at the present time over 30,000 people turn out to witness the performances. This will be the first year that Powers has had charge of it, but it will also be one of the greatest meets that the Worcester Fair management has ever promoted.

The one mile event should be a great race. For this event Powers has secured the entries of the first, second and third place winners in the great one mile contest at the National A. A. A. championships in Tuxer, Powers and Hedlund.

It seems almost impossible to believe that the management has been able to secure these athletes to compete in one race but through Powers' connection with athletes he has been able to do so. This will be the last appearance of Norman S. Tabey as an athlete in this country for he will leave the first part of this month to take up his studies in Oxford.

In addition to these men, Melvin Sheppard will be a starter in either the quarter or half mile event. Sheppard has always been an idol at the Worcester Fair meet for on his two previous appearances he has been able to win both of his races from scratch. He will probably enter the half-mile event this year.

The B. A. A. will enter every athlete of note in the different events, while all of the other Boston clubs will be well represented. In the 100-yard event, Howard P. Drew will make his appearance and as he has never been defeated he should also win his event, although he will be heavily handicapped. It was at this fair that Drew first gained prominence by defeating Ted Hamedell in both the 100 and 220 yard events.

The athletes of Greater Boston will have a fine opportunity of performing Labor Day, for on that date there will be a score of track and field meets held throughout New England. Principal among these will be the picnic of the Scottish Clans which will be held at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury. This is always one of the best outdoor athletic meets of the year.

GAFFNEY WARS ON LYNCH AND HIS UMPIRES

In an open telegram addressed to President Thomas J. Lynch of the National League, President James E. Gaffney of the Pilgrims states his dissatisfaction with the work of the umpires in the old organization and bitterly scores the league head for the manner in which he handles the arbitrators of his circuit. Following is the contents of the telegram:

Boston, Aug. 26, 1913.

Thomas J. Lynch, President National League P. B. B. Clubs, New York:

In the absence of Manager Stallings it was a fine thing to suspend Sweeney. Accept my thanks for such consideration. The spirit displayed is worthy of your past and present work as the league's president. I thought you might be away on another vacation and thus have escaped. If you will accept a suggestion, here it is: Travel around the circuit and look your umpires over, which, I understand, is supposed to be one of your duties. Had you done so this year, umpires, and not ball players, would have drawn suspensions.

JAMES E. GAFFNEY,
President Boston National B. B. C.

The telegram was written following the three-day suspension of Acting Manager Bill Sweeney of the Pilgrims for his run in with Umpire Rigler on Monday. Sweeney was put out of the game following a wordy battle with Rigler. Carey of the Pirates, Bill charged, blocked off Whaling's chance to catch Dolan stealing second by raising his bat and deliberately stepping in front of the Pilgrim catcher. Rigler would not listen to Sweeney's protest and waived him away, but Bill would not go until some words had been exchanged between himself and Rigler. Suspension followed.

"I told Rigler I was up there to protest against his decision as acting head of the team in Mr. Stallings' absence," said Sweeney, "and added that, although my protest was just and civil, he (Rigler) would no doubt file a report to President Lynch stating what were not facts, as he did early this season when I was fined $50 off for three days."

U. of W. Nine Tours Japan.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 27.—The University of Washington baseball team has sailed for a two-months' tour of Japan. Games will be played with teams of the leading universities.

Williams Praised by McLoughlin for Brilliant Tennis

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—Maurice E. McLoughlin would say nothing for publication today, until he had been urged by President Robert D. Wrenn himself. Finally he remarked:

"Yes, I am, of course, happy to keep my tennis championship. I may be excused for being proud to have beaten so worthy a foe as Dick Williams. His tennis was grand at times, his "gets" quite the most wonderful I have ever seen on a court. He is a great tennis player and will be a greater one before long. I regret that every match must have one loser, for we, ably helped by Harold H. Hackett, have fought side by side for months for the most precious tennis bowl in existence. I am also glad that our match, and indeed the whole tourney passed off without the semblance of a mistake. And now for home. The East is wonderful in its hospitality, but home will seem meet, particularly after a five days' tedious trip across the country."

Champion Wiley Beaten by Carman

Clarence Carman, the Newark bicyclist, made good his intentions by defeating Champion George Wiley two straight heats at the Revere cycle track behind motor pace and he will bear close watching in the one hour brassard race which will be held at the Beach on next Saturday night. The other competitors in this race will be Wiley, Mitten, the runner-up for the championship, and Percy Lawrence of San Francisco, whom many thought would have been a finalist in the this event but for motor trouble.

Donald McDougall, the world's champion amateur, who will ride Willie Turville of Revere in a match race, in his first local appearance made a big impression by his speed. In the other races, Carl Roden took the motor honors, Willie Turville and L. C. Hollins split the amateur events. He former winning the five-mile and the latter the half mile; Pat Logan won the two mile professional while Percy Cutler led a fast field in the half mile race.

145 GOLFERS IN NATIONAL TITLE PLAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—With an entry list of 145 amateur golfers, including two from England and a pair from Canada, the annual national championship tournament of the United States Golf Association, which will begin at Garden City, Long Island, next Monday and last throughout the week, promises to be unusually interesting.

The British players who will strive for the American title are Victor Maude of the Princes Golf Club and Abe Mitchell of the Cantalupe Golf Club, England.

Among the New England aspirants are Francis Gulmet of Woodland and Heiger Schmidt of Worcester, Mass.

Every State Entered in National Shoot

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 27.—Everything is in readiness for the start of the National team match tomorrow morning. Teams from practically every State in the Union and from Hawaii are entered. Each team has twelve men who are to shoot at the 200, 600 and 1,000-yard ranges and make a skirmish run of 600 yards.

The National revolver match will also start tomorrow. The international matches begin Monday morning.

Special prizes have been awarded the following who had high scores in the National Individual match on Monday: Second Lieutenant F. P. Jacobs, United States Infantry, for a possible score of 100 in the skirmish run; Second Lieutenant H. A. Riley, United States Infantry, for a score of ninety-eight; Captain C. W. Gerdes, Pennsylvania, for a perfect score of fifty on the rapid-fire line.

Jess Willard's Death Blow Unintentional

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—The death of John ("Bull") Young was "unintentional br Jess Willard," according to the verdict of a Coroner's Jury. The death was caused, the verdict said, by concussion of the brain due to a blow on the chin delivered by Jess Willard. The prosecution had announced that the Coroner's verdict would not alter the manslaughter charges against Willard and eleven others as a result of the fatal boxing contest last week at the Vernon Arena.

German Sonders Are Stamped O. K.

After a careful inspection of the German sonder boats, Augela VI, Serum and Wittelsbach X., which are to take part in the international matches at Marblehead next week, Professor Dr. A. Everett, official measurer of the Eastern Yacht Club, said that the craft were up to requirements in every way. The inspection included weighing, measurements and planking thickness.

Vardon Lowers Record.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, English professional golfers, touring the United States, at the Mayfield Club, defeated Joe K. Bole, city champion of Cleveland, and Eben M. Byers of Pittsburgh, 2 up, in a thirty-six-hole match. Vardon lowered the course record.

RAIN PREVENTS FINAL PILGRIM-PIRATE BATTLE

The heavy rainfall shortly after noon today drenched the South End Grounds and caused the postponement of the final Pilgrim-Pirate game, which was scheduled. As soon as the game was called, both teams immediately left town, the Pilgrims for Brooklyn, where they open with the Dodgers tomorrow and the Pirates for home, where they meet the Cubs Friday.

The calling of the game gives the Pilgrims the series for the year, as today's game will not be played. The National League ruling in regard to the matter is that when the last game scheduled between two games cannot be played, it must be wiped on the list, unless one of the teams has a chance for the pennant. The Pilgrims meet the Pirates in two more games this season and as the Stallings team has already won eleven of the nineteen game played, the series rests with Boston.

Adams Delivery Too Much for Pilgrims.

With Babe Adams pitching his very best brand of ball, the Pilgrims never had much of a chance to win yesterday's game. The one-time world's series hero had the battle in the palm of his hand all the way, and the efforts of the Boston batters to hit his offerings were, for the most part, ludicrous. Just three hits were made off the Pirate and one of them, a bunt by Hess in the sixth, was very scratchy. Miller fielded the ball, but Adams neglected to cover first, so the big pitcher made the station safely. The other two bangs were clean enough. Whaling netting the right field fence in the third and Maranville chopping a liner to left in the ninth.

Sweeney's Absence Causes a Shift.

Bill Sweeney drew a three-day suspension for his words and with Umpire Rigler Monday and his absence caused a shift in he infield lineup. Fred Smith took Bill's place at second and McDonald covered third. Smith made the star fielding play of the game in the second inning, when he scooped up Dolan's smash over second with bare hand and tossed out the speedy third baseman at first. The play was as nifty as one would wish to see, the young infielder making a lightning recovery and getting his man by several yards.

Bill Directed the Team from the Bench.

Sweeney did his directing from a seat in the grand stand close by the Pilgrim bench. When he had something on his mind he thought ought to be conveyed to his teammates, he went through a more or less elaborate system of wigwagging, which after more or less consultation among the players, was carried into effect. "Hap" Myers acted as captain on the field, though his duties were very light, the sittright pitching of Adams making strategy out of the question.

Otto Hess Pitched Fairly Good Ball.

Hess pitched a good game, and against less streanuous opposition might have added a win to his record. He was, however, personally responsible for the loss, a walk in the sixth paving the way for the first Pirate run, while a balk put Miller on third in the seventh, from whence he scored on an outfield fly. In the ninth he rather lost his effectiveness and three very sharp bangs gave the hostiles another unnecessary tally.

What? Honus Fanned Twice in Succession.

The limelight was on Honus Wagner, though in a somewhat unusual manner for him. He drew the popular attention by fanning twice in succession, something that no records extant show he ever did here before. Here sure hat something on the ball, for Carey, usually a good hitter, bumped the wind three times running.

Usual Ninth Inning Rally Stopped Short.

It looked for a time as if the Pilgrims were on another last ditch tack when the ninth opened. Hess punched a sizzler along the first base line, but Miller made a swell stop at full reach and beat the pitcher to the bag. When Maranville followed with a clean single to left the "fans" who had started for the exits stopped to watch. But the next two men were easy outs.

RED SOX STOP OVER FOR GAME AT SYRACUSE

Today is an open date in the American League schedule, but the Red Sox will not be found idle, for they dropped off at Syracuse en route to Boston from Detroit, where they are scheduled to meet the New York State League club of that city in an exhibition game this afternoon. Tomorrow they open a long engagement at the Fenway Park, which extends to September 27, except for a three-game series with the Athletics at Philadelphia. The 27th will mark their final play before the home "fans," and then they journey to New York for three days. From thence they move to Washington for three games, the final of which will be their closing game of the American League season.

Walter Johnson to Pitch Opening Game.

According to dispatches from Washington to the Red Sox office trouble is in store for the Red Sox right at the very opening. Clark Griffith will pitch his big card, Walter Johnson, against the Carrigans in the first encounter of a three-game series. Johnson is going after two records right now and believes that he will eventually succeed in making both. In the first place he hopes to break Rube Marquard's mark of nineteen straight victories, and if that is accomplished he will have bettered Joe Wood's record of 34 wins and five losses, made last season. Already Johnson has won fourteen successive games and is confident that he will be successful in his try for the two new marks.

New Faces in Sox Lineup Tomorrow.

Several new faces will appear in the Red Sox lineup, when they take the field tomorrow. Young Mundy, who has played first base in the last few games, will probably be retained at that position and Reig, who has the name of being the "freshest guy" in baseball, will be seen cavorting in the direction of Duffy Lewis' cliff. Reig played his first game with the Red Sox yesterday and his work was of a satisfying nature to Manager Bill Carrigan. Bill intends to give Mundy a thorough tryout, despite the fact that the youngster has shown nothing as yet, that would indicate he is of major league calibre. Other youngsters will be seen in the lineup from time to time during the remaining days of the season, as Carrigan believes this a good chance to look over his recruit material.

Carrigan's Error Nearly Cost Game.

Manager Carrigan's failure to order Ty Cobb passed purposely in the seventh inning of yesterday's Red Sox-Tiger fracas well at Detroit nearly cost Boston the game, which they eventually won 7—6. Cobb doubled, scoring Bush from third with the tying run. Veach, next up, was an easy infield out, retiring the side.

In the next inning Manager Carrigan wanted Moseley's turn at bat by having that pitcher sacrifice Cady from second to third, with one down and one run needed to win, instead of using a pinch hitter instead of the batting pitcher. Hooper doubled, scoring Cady with the winning run as no harm was done. But had Hooper failed there would have been loud criticism of Carrigan's judgment.

THE TUNNEL

The Greatest Story of Its Kind Since Jules Verne

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

OVER two hundred miles out under the ocean, three thousand men are at work pushing a great tunnel out under the Atlantic, the most gigantic engineering scheme ever conceived by the brain of man. Rives, the chief engineer of the new work, has just arrived on the scene, after a trip from shore in a tunnel train running over a hundred miles an hour. Suddenly there is an explosion and men and machinery are swept backward by a tremendous blast. Then follows a scene of horror. Rives and a few survivors stumble on foot away from the disaster, and after hours they come into the view of faint lights at main station No. 4.

A train is standing there, but just as the leaders of the survivors reach the steps of the rear car, the train slides out into the tunnel and leaves them screaming and cursing and running in the dark.

The story then goes back to the beginning of the great project. A score of financiers are gathered on the roof of the fifty-two-story Hotel Atlantic, called together by the summons of Lloyd, the master man of money. There, introduced by Rives, McKendree Allan, the inventor, tells them of his great plan to tunnel the Atlantic. "My tunnel," he says, "is going to be 3,100 miles long.

"The tunnel city is built on the Jersey plains, and work is pushed at top speed. Twenty thousand men, with great dredgers, push down into the bowels of the earth. Similar scenes are being enacted in Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London. Allan is the moving spirit everywhere. He is almost never at his home in Tunnel City, and his wife tells Rives how deeply she is hurt. Mrs. Allan and Rives find they love one another, and they kiss. He blames himself, but she tells him it could not be helped.

When the news of the disaster in the tunnel reaches the surface, the workers go crazy. Harrison, Rives' chief of staff, is mobbed and flees for his life. He races in his auto and tells Mrs. Allan. Not supposing the mob is anywhere near her house, she goes out on the street. Allan returns to Tunnel City to find his wife and child slain. He runs a rescue train into the tunnel and finds Rives, white-haired and emaciated, transformed in appearance into an old man.

The workmen are thoroughly frightened by the death of thousands of their comrades and refuse to enter the tunnel. Conferences with their leaders produce no result and Allan determines to address the men himself.

Now Go on with the Story

"You are told that I am working because it is making me rich. That is not true. I was rich enough for one man before the first spade was driven into the ground where we stand. We who are building this tunnel—you and I—are building for our children and our children's children. Every man who gives up his life for this work is a saint in the religion of labor, which is the religion of our time.

"Any man who turns back now is a coward and cowards are not needed here. But I call on you as brave men, who are big enough and brave enough to work for a big and brave thing, to come back with me and conquer the earth!"

He ceased and lowered the megaphone to show that he had finished. There was an instant's silence and then a rippling, ragged cheer that swelled louder and louder and suddenly stopped, as if a hand had been pressed against every mouth. It was the hand of terror, the terror they had for a few moments forgotten.

That night there was another big meeting and next day the leaders told Allan that the men would not return to work. He gave orders that all strikers should vacate their houses within forty-eight hours.

The tunnel was empty, Tunnel City silent and lifeless. Only here and there along the streets a soldier stood, leaning on his rifle.

* * * * * *

Under pressure of certain prominent and humane men and women Allan amended his original lock-out order to the effect that all married men would be allowed a longer time in which to make up their minds, and that in the meantime their families should be undisturbed in their present quarters. But all single men, those that had lived for years in the immense barracks erected for them, were ordered to vacate at once, and the exodus began.

Guided by its leaders, the great army of strikers marched into New York City to hold a gigantic demonstration. Even the men allowed a longer period of grace by virtue of their family responsibilities joined. For two days Tunnel City was a city of the dead, and all of one day the thousands of strikers paraded the streets of the great city bearing banners that blazoned to the world their episodes of Allan and all the masters of the tunnel.

Allan and Lloyd were hung in effigy, a movable gallows being carted around for the purpose so that the execution might take place wherever the spirit moved them. The streets rang with the "Marseillaise," but there was no violence. They were not welcome in New York, but they had shrewdly calculated on exhibit that won the sympathy of thousands and started a perfect shower of money to the war chest of the strike.

This was a delegation marching four abreast and nearly a half mile long. The leader carried a banner with the sad inscription "Mac's Cripples." Every man who marched behind that banner was maimed in such a manner that the spectators could not but see it. Some had lost both arms, some a leg, some an arm and others an arm and leg. Some were without an ear and ear and hair only on one side of the head. More than a few were totally blind and were led along by their comrades.

It is a singular fact that the first contribution for those was $10,000 from Ethel Lloyd, who also later on took pains to see that all of them were provided for in public or private institutions. When the procession marched past the Syndicate building there was much swearing and general uproar, but the demonstration was carried out, and by the next morning the city was quiet. Thousands of the strikers returned to Tunnel City temporarily, then scattered in search of work. But the strike was successful in so far that the industry paralyzed the tunnel work.

Then Allan took counsel with his engineers and with Bishop Wolf, who will be remembered as financial director of the syndicate. The deposit of sanatorium was found to be thirty feet deep in the thinnest place of the great submarine chamber which Allan ordered to be opened. Since actual tunnel work was temporarily impossible Allan proposed that this invaluable treasure be mined and marketed pending the breaking of the strike.

"But how can we mine it if you have no laborers?" objected Wolf.

"The Pittsburgh people will snap at a profit-sharing offer," returned Allan. "Make them a proposition to mine and split the profits with us."

Allan was right, but Wolf was too shrewd to offer to split even. He demanded sixty per cent, and declared he could take no less, thus allowing them two weeks in which to beat him down to fifty-two and one-half per cent. The mineral company ended by taking on labor and began working three shifts, which Allan insisted on, as he believed that the strike could not last more than a month or two, and he wanted the submarium and its miners out of the way.

Thus, while the tunnel was idle, other hands were cleaning out a three-thousand-foot chamber 60 miles ashore to use in a thousand valuable ways in the permanent construction, and at the same time the tunnel was making money at the rate of thousands a day instead of eating up that much.

In the same way a rich vein of potassium and another of iron ore that had been tapped in the Hinsdale Mountains worked for an enormous profit, and Allan leased water power rights and left.

"If we had to have a strike, it's just as well that we are able to make it pay," he remarked, philosophically, and set himself to work on the pens for utilizing the great chambers.

It was well in more senses than one, for the financial condition of the syndicate was by no means satisfactory, though far from alarming. They had planned the second big stock issue for January of that year but with a strike on this was impossible. Consequently their cash balance was running a little low and the profits of these ventures gave it a more healthful appearance.

The Newest in Afternoon Wear

By OLIVETTE

AFTERNOON tea is the fad of stay-at-homes, and what costume could be smarter for the occasion than a black lansdowne, satin crepe de chine or any other soft, clinging material?

The "Cubist" sleeves and inset fan at the back of the draped skirt, in the model shown above, are of black satin, flowered in red and green. The vest is of white moussoline with a tiny hemstitched band marking the centre front; and revers. Medici collar and long tie are of dainty spiderweb shadow lace in faint ecru.

A distinctly new model and a forerunner of the Fall styles is the deep slash at the point of the waist where revers lengthen into tie.

The extreme tendencies of the Fall fashions are well demonstrated by the suit illustrated above. The lengthening waist-line, the long coat, the slit, draped skirt and the loose kimono sleeve are all found combined in this one model.

The suit is of dark blue broadcloth with square collar and cuffs of blurred pomegranate red and blue Oriental silk. Frogs of braid fasten the single-breasted coat, and fancy Hercules braid edges the collar, cuffs, and the wide belt that girdles the fulness of the coat below the waist-line, and that stops in the canting line of patch pocket half way to the front.

The coat curves into its greatest length at the sides, where it ends in points and then gradually shortens across the back.

The skirt is slit directly in front, and has a band of braid outlining the slit and continuing up to knee height, where it is held by a simulated hook-and-eye shaped frog of braid. The line of the braid continues up parallel to itself and directly in line with the left end of the braid frog. Braid ornaments hold in the skirt at each side.

Deceiving Your Wife

By WINIFRED BLACK

"I LOVE my wife," said the man who is in love with another woman, "and I don't want her to know anything that will hurt her. I protect her from her own foolish faucies, I believe it is my duty to do that," and Then he went and sent his wife a box of roses and went to dine—with the other woman.

I wonder if that man believes himself? I wonder if he thinks he is going to help wife to shield her—to keep her from suffering?

I wonder if he thinks that any one else on earth believes him, when he says that. Why, you poor, blind, foolish fellow, you are lying to your wife not to protect her, but to protect yourself. You find her convenient—a comfortable appendage, a good thing to have in the family—that wife of yours—and you don't want to let loose of her, that's all that makes you lie to her.

You want to keep her—and the other woman, too. Well, then, why don't you look yourself in the face and see what a coward looks like, a coward and a thief.

Why don't you give your wife a chance to choose her life? If she knew she might leave you. Precisely—why not?

Why not let her leave you—is that the sort of barrage you make—a barrage that binds her and looses you, whenever you feel so inclined? Why don't you tell your wife the truth and let her choose? Don't you owe her at least that fairness? Why not?

What is it about a woman that makes it fair for you to cheat her, and then say you do it to "keep her from worrying?" What if your partner did that way? What if he stole from you and then said he didn't tell you about it because he didn't want you to worry. What kind of an excuse would you call that?

Would you pay much attention to it—you, the sane, reasonable, business man? You would not. You would call him what he was, a coward and a thief. Why aren't you just those two things, exactly, when you deceive your wife and then don't tell her, "to protect her."

Nonsense, man alive, stuff and nonsense! That sort of argument might hold water fifty years ago. It won't do now.

That wife of yours is something besides your wife. She's a woman, a human being, with a human being's right to choose. If you are worthless, unfaithful, a fickle fool, with your eyes everywhere but at home, why not let her know the truth and do as she thinks best about it?

Maybe she wouldn't leave you. After all, some women are like that. Maybe she would cling and cry and beg and implore you never to leave her.

Well, you know you aren't the first to pay the piper. Would you get all your joys for nothing? They aren't worth much if you can't pay the price, are they?

Maybe she would give you the liberty you think you want, just to see you beg for her charms again. Maybe she is just waiting for an excuse to get away from you herself. She may not be so dead in love with you, after all. Perhaps she just stands you for the same reason that you deceive her, to protect you. Why don't you tell her the truth and be done with it, once and for all?

Give the woman a chance, give her a show. You demand that much for yourself, why not give it to her, you who are so brave, so noble minded, so kind? What? Send her away where she is "safe." Put her where she can't make you any trouble, and where she won't hear anything to make her unhappy? Why, you poor fool, every word you speak, every look you give, every tone of your voice, every turn of your hand tells her what you try to conceal "for her sake."

She may not know what she knows, but she knows all the same—and all the lies you can tell won't deceive her, really, at all.

What are you thinking of? You can't compete with a woman in affairs like this. Love is a woman's business. She knows it from beginning to end, backward and forward—in and out. You're just an amateur at the game, you, or the wisest man who ever lived. You just sit at off hours, she makes it her whole life.

You can make a woman believe you are wise when you are a fool; you can make her believe you are rich when you are poor; you can make her believe you are noble when you are mean, but you can never, never, as long as the sun goes round, make her believe that you are true to her when you are not.

All the time she knows, don't forget that—Mr. Amateur—you're playing her game, when you play at love—and you're playing it pretty badly, according to her standards, too!

"Protect" her, if you will. Tell her all the elaborate tales you can—if she be as ignorant as a Russian peasant—that one thing she knows, better than you, with all your wisdom, will ever dream of knowing. And the Other Woman knows she knows, no matter what she tries to make you believe, for she, too, is a woman, and to her, too, the game is life itself.

What a fool you are to try to deceive either of them—when you try a fling at it—in your bungling amateur way.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

It was after a junior league match, in which the home side lost eight goals to all. The goalkeeper was naturally blamed for the disaster, and, overhearing that things were being said about him, went straight to the captain and lodged a complaint.

"Did you tell Bill that I was the worst goalkeeper in the village?"

"No, I didn't. I thought he knew," was the reply.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he feebly responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly replied the woman, as she counted the contents of her purse.

"Will you give me something to drink?" he asked faintly of the nurse.

"Certainly," said the nurse, offering him a glass of water.

He put up his hand feebly.

"Give it to me in a teaspoon, please," he whispered, huskily, "until I get used to it."

A lawyer got into an argument with a physician over the relative merits of their respective professions.

"I don't say that all lawyers are villains," said the doctor, "but you'll have to admit that your profession doesn't make angels of men."

"No," retorted the lawyer, "you doctors certainly have the best of us there."

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

By Anna Katharine Green

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green

BIDDING herewell to his friends in the kitchen, he passed out of the back door and around the house. The next minute the front doorbell rang, and Jean, the butler, upon opening that door, was astounded at seeing before him the solemn and unmoved countenance of his late visitor, who, looking at him as if he had never seen him before, asked if Mrs. Gretorex was in, and being assured she was by the dumfounded servant stepped in and took his seat in the parlor as if he had never crossed the threshold of a kitchen in his life.

"He want to see Mrs. Gretorex? Why he want to see Mrs. Gretorex?" cried Jean, ascending the back stairs three steps at a time.

"Shure, I don't know," returned Peter, laying a sly finger against his nose, "but what I do know is this: I've business in the front hall, and it won't keep a minute, so good day to ye.'

And he was off before Jean's slower wits took in the situation.

Mr. Gryce was laboring under Mrs. Gretorex's displeasure and he knew it. His first words, therefore, were uttered with that simple dignity which always inspires respect.

"You have consented to see me," was his opening remark. "You are very kind, for I feel that you have some reason to only to distrust my good judgment but the fairness of my conduct. Yet I but made a mistake which also men out of ten would have made in my place. I was going to say ten men, but I do not wish to appear egotistical."

His smile was honest, his bearing respectful yet not subservient, his tone all that could be desired. But Mrs. Gretorex's pride was not easily subdued. She looked at him with cold severity, and observed in saying this a gracious tone:

"I do not understand to what you allude, I know of no mistake you made except that of taking Dr. Cameron into your confidence against my express wishes."

"Then he has not explained to you the meaning of our conduct that night?"

"He did not require it."

Mr. Gryce allowed a faint expression of surprise to escape him.

"You could not have known how interesting the subject was," he remarked. Then before she could speak, asked impressively: "Did you know that Miss Gretorex had a double in town that night?"

"A double?"

"Some one who looked like her—looked like her so much that even her best friend was deceived? I allude to Dr. Cameron."

VERY PERPLEXING

The perplexity of Mrs. Gretorex was unmistakable.

"I have no idea what you mean," she declared, "and I cannot believe in any such likeness. Mrs. Cameron's expression is not a common one."

"So much the more excuse for me," he suggested. "I thought I was completely justified in going to the person the same of your daughter, especially as she wore a dress not unlike that in which Miss Gretorex was said to have disappeared."

Incredulity, mixed with a little anxiety, still held its own in the expression of Mrs. Gretorex's face.

"Still I do not understand you. Where was this person, and who did she turn out to be? You excite my curiosity, Mr. Gryce."

The detective glanced at the door and slightly changed his seat.

"Some time can be best discussed in private," he suggested. "I thought I heard a step in the hall."

She rose and led the way into the library. "Say what you have to say," she exclaimed. "Who was the lady? I am eager to hear."

He took a position which enabled him to watch her face.

"Her name you must already know," said he. "It has been in the newspapers enough lately. Mildred Farley, the girl who died of poison that same night."

Farley! trembled slowly from her lips. "Farley?"

"I thought the name would have a familiar sound to you," he murmured, noting carefully her look of startled amazement. "I am sorry to recall to you such a painful subject with calm composure.

"You mistake," she assured him, "I know nobody of that name. Why should you think I did?"

"Because she visited your house so often, was so well known to your daughter, and was, if I do not greatly mistake, in the building and in your own Gretorex's room the evening Miss Gretorex was married, and she herself met her fearful death."

It was all news, and, it seemed, unwelcome news, astounding news, to the lady before him. She forgot his presence and her own reserve and spoke as if he had not been in the room.

"A person by the name of Farley," she repeated, "known to Genevieve and like her enough to be called her double. What does it mean?"

She watched her, and made no answer; all the detective was alert in him.

"I believe you said she died," Mrs. Gretorex suddenly cried, rousing as if out of a dream. "Is it the same girl that was picked up from the sidewalk by somebody and carried away in a gig?"

NOT SEEN.

"The same, madam; a young dressmaker, you remember, who was to have been married that same night. But she preferred to assist your daughter at her wedding to taking part in one herself."

Mrs. Gretorex looked at him with wide open eyes from which all the haughtiness had fled.

"You seem to know a great deal about Mrs. Cameron," she asserted; "more than her mother does or her best friends. I was not aware that any one was here to assist my daughter, least of all a person who bore her looks and answered to the name of Farley. And yet it was a circumstance that would not be likely to escape attention. Some of the servants must have seen her if I did not. But none of them have spoken of it."

"They were too accustomed to her visits here."

"Too accustomed"——

"And then they did not see her face. She was always veiled."

"Do you mean," she demanded, "that the person who brought home my daughter's dresses and whom my daughter received when she would see no one else, was a Fay—was this girl who you say died on her wedding night so suddenly and mysteriously?"

"I do. It has not been made public, nor am I sure that Mrs. Cameron herself knows of this identity. But certain evidences difficult to explain away or other theory, make it a positive fact to me. It is my reason for being here; the cause of our present conversation. I want to discover the truth about this girl."

But Mrs. Gretorex suddenly change color, or was it only his imagination that made him think so? She was a dignified, worldly-wise woman, whom it would have taken much to shake out of her social calm. Was this mere hidden in his words and had it disturbed her equanimity? He could not tell.

"That is very natural," she conceded, with a slight change of position. "In some profession such inquiries become duties; but I do not think you can find out much about here here."

"Certainly not, if you never met her nor spoke to her; and I believe you assured me you never did."

"Never, sir."

There was truth in her accents, as well as much hauteur; he found himself called to do shift his ground.

"Then," said he, "I have only to bid you good day. And yet"—he added, "there is one thing you can do for me and the cause of law and justice which I represent. Miss Farley, if here that night, went directly to your daughter's room. She wore a brown veil, and if as presumably happened, she took off that veil, there is reason to believe she left it behind her. For when the body was brought home to her boarding place, this article of apparel was not only missing, but another veil of different color and apparently quite new, was found clinging to her garments. Now if in the arrangement of the room after your daughter's departure a brown veil was found, there is provided one other small link toward making our chain of evidence complete."

A COMMON AFFAIR

"A brown veil is a very common affair; my daughter may have had a dozen for aught I know."

"Might I look about the room?"

"How can I tell?"

"And you cannot accommodate me?"

"Sir, I cannot. Leave me now at the room. It is as much my daughter left it," she declared somewhat bitterly. "She has not found time to put it to rights. It is, and I certainly was not going to arrange and dispose of her effects without her assistance. But you speak of a chain of evidence. Evidence of what and evidence against whom? It is surely not indifferent for me to inquire."

GRAINS OF WISDOM

Never let a woman tell you a secret, if you keep it she will think you are not interested, and if you repeat it she will be still madder.

There would be no trouble about who had the last word were it not for the men.

There are people who do not know an opportunity until it is gone, and there are some Darwinized mortals who are spared the pain of recognizing it even then.

We envy many of our social acquaintances, but nearly all of us are on the waiting list.

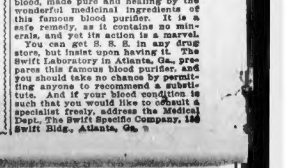
Precocious Child (to friend)—"I notice a clothes basket going back and forth between your house and Mrs. Scrubbins' every day."

"What of it?"

"Do you wash for them, or do they wash for you?"

Look Out For Poison Ivy



Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen run risk of poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots.

S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principles of eczema, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 159 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I STAYED up late with Ma last nite beekuss Pa went to a lodge bank-wet & Ma sed she wud feel lone-sum up in the country if I didn't stay up & keep her company. I guess Ma was kind of scared, beekuss wen we are in the city there is always the poleece to call up & up in the country there isent any poleece. So I stayed up.

Pa was awful good, for him. He knew Ma & me was up waiting for him, so he didnot stay very long at the bankwet. He was hoam at 11 o'clock, but he brought a man with him & the man had drank too much champane & Pa had enut too.

Mister Hathaway sed Pa, here is my fleet waiting for me. Wife, sed Pa, this is Mister Hathaway of California. Bobbie, this is Mister Hathaway of the Golden West. He is a skoller & a gentleman. If does my hart good to run into a Westerner eggean, sed Pa, & I was telling Mister Hathaway he wud have to stay here tonite instead of going to a hotel.

You have a wonderful family, sed Mister Hathaway, wen he was taking off his overcoat, a wonderful family. He hadent saw us all, he was looking on the floor for a peg on wich to hang his overcoat on.

Yes, I think they are wonderful, sed Pa.

It is a wonderful thing to have a wonderful family, sed Mister Hathaway. I used to have a wonderful family, too, a wife and son, but that was long ago. They are sleeping there last sleep now, out where the blue Pacific rolls endlessly in upon the golden strand. Then Mister Hathaway bergan to cry.

There, there, sed Ma, dsaint feel so badly. Let me hang up your coat & talk this choke.

These teers are unmanly, sed Mister Hathaway, but wen I thing how happy I once was, & see how happy your husband is now, I must weep. The worknigs of Fate are inskrutabel, he sed. Then he tried to set down on the back of the chair & Ma helped him into his seet.

Tell me all about the bankwet, sed Ma. Did you have a nice time, sed Mister Hathaway. The guests were smiling & the wine was sparkling, but I seddent touch it. It wud have choked me, he sed, beekauss my hart was away out in the West ware the blue Pacific thunders against the Seal Rocks. Then he began to cry sum more.

I was out there three years ago with my husband sed Ma, & we saw all the seals on the rocks. It was very amusing, I thought, they payred around so happy.

Of course they playe'd around happy sed Mister Hathaway. Why shuddent they be happy. Did them seals have any wonderful family tiez, or a fine green sod of my native state? No, they did not. Who dares to say that they did? he asked.

Nobody, my deer Mister Hathaway, sed Ma. Please calm yure self. Pa shud at least have sipped sum of the wine, sed Ma. It wud have cheered you up.

The wine, the sparkling, mocking wine, sed Mister Hathaway. Take it away from me! they make me I drink wine! What is wine to me? I scorn it, sed Mister Hathaway. Then he bergt to weep in the chair & Ma wiped the teers off his cheeks & sed Poor man, I haven't the hart to scold now. Ma is a deer Ma.

Then Pa put his friend to bed.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with pimples. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling going down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since, and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Playing with Cupid—and After

This is the Way the Game with Cupid Begins—

But It Ends So.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"LOVE comes like a Summer sigh," goes an old song, and those who have known, nothing of Love, or know it only in its beginning, think, calm-eyed, that Love is always a Summer sigh—a lute-like strain, sweet, soothing, telling a story of flowers shaking their heavy, honey-scented heads drowsily in the sun; of birds giving sleepy twitterers from under the shade of the leaves, and of lazy streams, droning and crooning their way between warm, mossy banks, and giving no slot in their songs that they were ever turbulent.

That the Summer sigh is followed by tempestuous winds and devastating floods that tear down and sweep destruction where all was lazy peace, is never credited by those who do not know Love.

The girl whose love tale is in the beginning regards Love as she would a plaything. She tosses him to the air, sometimes catching him with fervent arms and loving kisses, and as often letting him fall that she may watch his woe-begone face and make merry over his hurtings.

She tweaks, pinches, slaps and throws the little god about, finding renewed merriment in every moan and protest.

"Love," she sings, "is more than a Summer sigh. He is a game. He is the greatest joy in the world."

First bot, then cold; first loving, then disdainful; the plaything in her hands would be driven mad entirely did he not know that, just as surely as tomorrow's sun follows today, he must again come.

He is the plaything today. He knows who will be the juggler tomorrow, and with a face which bears no sign of the smiles in his heart he submits to every torture she imposes.

And bides his time!

What hour marks the beginning of the new game where Love is the juggler and the plaything is in hands is the bruised and aching heart of his tormentor no one knows.

The inexperienced declare that that hour never strikes. The love-scorned know that it struck when they were merriest, and that in a twinkling they found themselves the sport of that which had been their game.

The girl who is playing with Love grows tired and bids Love go. He turns to depart, and there comes to her a swift revelation of the dreariness of life without him, and she commands him to stay.

The hour has struck! He refuses, and then she drops to her knees and begs for that which she once scorned.

"Only stay," she implores, "and you may do with me as you will." And Love stays, and for every tear that she has made him shed he makes her shed a torrent.

Every little pinch and bruise on his body has made a mark on his heart that is charged to her account, for which she must pay in humiliation and anguish. No cold-blooded, calculating enemy who starts out to destroy and less nothing under heaven interrupt or change or halt or defeat his plans, was ever more ruthless than this little God of Love.

Love is, as the young hope, the only real joy life holds. And only those who have known it know the depths of despair and sorrow.

In the beginning it is the plaything; in the end the hearts of men and women are its toys.

A Bachelor's Diary

AUGUST 14.—I have decided that the chief difference between the trained nurse and the untrained nurse is the salary and the uniform. Richards, who was a green country girl when I employed her to serve as nurse-maid for Elisabeth and Manette, and whose only knowledge of illness was gained through their childish complaints, is just as skilful in her care of me as the uniformed nurse and infinitely more patient.

Not that I would accuse the trained nurse of being impatient; she is never that, but somehow her patience is purely mechanical. It is set by machinery, and when a certain amount of attention has been clipped off for me, the machinery comes to a dead stop. And I know then that it is time for her to take her morning or afternoon hour off.

"If I were dying," I said to her this morning, "and the clock struck three, what would you do?"

"Put on my hat and go for my walk," she replied very professionally. "I owe it to myself to take care of myself. Besides, I have seen too many persons die to be lamented."

"Does it distress you?" The subject had always interested me.

"No; only bothers me. The manner in which the living take on is trying to my nerves."

"Then you have no personal feeling for your patient?"

"Sometimes. When they are millionaires like you, and unmarried, there is always the chance of the helpless man falling in love with his nurse and marrying her. That is the real incentive that leads many women to adopt the profession."

THE SCRUTINY

"Come around here where I can look at you," I commanded. "If that is the motive that actuated you in putting on the uniform, I want to get a square look at you so that I can see what I am up against.

She laughed, and, evidently not afraid the bright light would injure her charms, threw up the blind before she took a seat beside my bed. I saw a red-cheeked, blue-eyed blonde; the bluest eyes and the reddest cheeks and mouth. Her hair had just enough of a curl to it to be tantalizing, and when I raised my hand and brushed back a lock that had strayed out from under her cap, she smiled: "It's naturally curly," she said.

"How about this?" I asked, pinching her cheek.

"The color is natural, too."

"You are a good-looking woman," I announced in the manner of one who has taken an inventory; "I don't see what the doctor meant by ordering me a pretty attendant like you."

She laughed. "Would you prefer that I went away?"

"No," grasping her hands. "I want you to stay. There is something about your hands I like. They are so strong and so firm. I rather like to hold them in the night, but I don't want to marry you."

"No?" with pretty eyebrows raised.

"No," I said. "I don't. It will be interesting to smash tradition by refusing to fall in love. Your beauty doesn't appeal to me, but your skill does. I'm going to start in to conquer your skill. It's the first time I've ever had a chance to study it at close range, and I'm going to make the most of it. Now, what do you say to that?"

"You are saying that in sarcasm," I replied, slipping my arm around her neck that she might lift me to a more comfortable position. "The truth is, it is the defiance of every woman's love."

DEFIANCE

She had lifted me higher on the pillows, but I did not remove my arm from around her neck.

"Now," I said, "that we understand each other, I don't see why we can't be very good friends. You are not so fatal in love with me, and I won't fall in love with you."

"Won't you?" with her blue eyes close to mine.

"No," stubbornly, shutting my eyes tight, "I won't."

"Won't you?" her face a little nearer.

"No," trying to turn my head. "I won't."

"It must be fine," I added, when she had slipped my arm from her neck and had taken her seat by the bed, and I had gotten my rather riotous nerves under control, "to be a poor man and find a woman whose love doesn't depend on his bank account."

"There is no such thing," hastening to give me my medicine, for the hour had come.

"I don't know what that is you are giving me," holding her hand with the spoon away from her mouth, "but it ought to be for fever. You are a fine nurse, you are, throwing a patient into a fever like this. I shall complain to the doctor about it."

"I am not afraid," putting the spoon at my lips, "that you will tell any one. You see," quickly handing me a glass of water, "I know all about the men."

"How did you learn?" suspiciously. "Is there a special treatment prescribed for my sex at your training school?"

"I have read all about you," with another laugh, "in the doctor's books."

Then she bathed my face, remarking professionally as she did it, that my color was now better, lowered my pillow-much against my will, smoothed the coverlid, pulled down the blinds and ordered me to take a nap.

A BEGINNING

I will sit outside on the veranda within call," she added, "and if you need me you can touch the bell."

She left the room so quietly and quickly that she was gone before I could detain her.

There are many qualities I like about her, and her quickness and quietness of manner are among them. There would be less domestic friction if every woman stepped as lightly and spoke as softly as this woman. A soft step and a sweet low voice and a certain repose of manner never got on my tired and irritable man's nerves.

She had reached the veranda. I heard Mrs. Allen ask her if I had fallen asleep and did not wait to hear her reply. I rang the bell.

In another minutes she was beside me. "You said to ring if I needed you. I need you to sit right here and see that I fall asleep."

"But you will not fall asleep with me here."

"But I am so very tired," a little peevish, and holding tight her hand as if to dismiss the argument, "that I am sure I will."

And I did. And I dreamed—well, I won't tell you, Diary, what I dreamed. You are nothing but a collection of dry paper leaves and wouldn't understand.

Do You Know That—

According to an Italian paper, the King of Sweden is probably the only monarch ever known to wear eye-glasses and spectacles on state occasions. In point of fact, eye-glasses and spectacles are very rare among royalties of today. This certainly is true of the British royal family, no member of which (unless we include the present Duke of Cumberland) has ever employed any aid to vision.

It costs the London County Council £4,000,000 to educate the 660,000 children in the school controlled by them.

Doctor's coachmen in Berlin wear white hats. This enables the public to promptly recognize a physician's vehicle in case his services are suddenly required.

The Secret of Popularity

By DOROTHY DIX.

A YOUNG girl, who desires to be admired and liked, writes to me and asks if I can tell her how to become one of those fortunate ones who are always welcome, and at whose coming every eye brightens and every lip takes on a smile.

I cannot answer my correspondent's question to the letter. The secret of popularity is one of those Dundreary things that no fellow can find out. Some people attract us, and others repel us without our ever being able to give any reason for it. There are scapegraces that we adore, and saints that we hate at sight. There are people with no pretensions to brilliancy of whose society we can never get enough, and learned individuals who bore us stiff, and yet by every law of logic we should prefer the company of the more intelligent. Only we don't.

Undoubtedly that illusive quality that we call personal magnetism has a great deal to do with an individual's popularity. Some people have a charm of personality that draws us to them just as irresistibly as the magnet draws the needle. This is a gift of nature. Fortunate, indeed, are those who possess it, but those who have not been so blessed as to be endowed with it can cultivate other qualities that make a very good substitute.

My first piece of advice to the girl who wants to be popular is to make a cast iron resolution not to talk about herself. Just take it for a rule, that has mighty few exceptions, that no human being on earth, outside of your mother, wants to hear all the details of your humble existence. When people ask you how you are, it is a mere conventionality. They are not thirsting and hungering to hear all the symptoms of your last illness, or the gory particulars of some surgical operation that you've gone through.

The first secret of popularity, then, is not to talk about yourself, and the second secret is to talk to people about themselves, or at least to listen while they discourse about themselves. This is a cinch, especially if, while you are listening, you can assume an expression of absorbed interest. Write it down as one of the immortal truths that to each of us the one subject of burning, thrilling, heart palpitating interest of which we can never hear enough is himself or herself. No people are considered so universally fascinating as those who are eloquent listeners, and it is better in society to be endowed with the ears of a donkey than with the tongue of a Cicero.

My third piece of advice to the girl who wishes to be popular is never to be sarcastic or say sharp things just because they are funny. There is no other way in the world by which a woman can so certainly commit social suicide as by the dagger of wit, and among the best hated people that you will ever find are the ladies who cannot resist saying smart and cutting things, no matter what they hurt.

A sense of humor is a most delightful thing in a woman, but when the gods would destroy a woman they give he wit. Men fear her, women loathe her and society shelves her. So if nature has seen fit to endow you with the gift of mimicry conceal it as carefully as you would a hump on your back. If you have the faculty of hitting off the weaknesses of your fellow creatures in an epigram, choke yourself on it rather than give utterances to it, and, no matter what the temptation, never say the bright things that bubble to your lip if they would leave any sting behind. Laugh with people, but never at them if you would be liked, for we may forgive those who slander and traduce us, but we never forgive those who make us appear ridiculous.

The fourth secret of popularity is tactfulness. Cultivate an ability to wal through life without stepping on other people's corns. Make it a business to remember what subjects are like waving a red flag before a mad bull to certain people, and don't be so stupid as to talk about divorces to people who are suffering from the recent death of wife, or about prison life to those who have a son in jail.

Finally, beloved, if you would have friends, you must show yourself friendly: if you would be liked, you must make yourself likable. Why should anybody pine for your society if you are an egotistical bore? Why should anybody enjoy listening to you if you do nothing but pour out a torrent of melancholy tears and wails at fate? Why should people want to have you around when you jump on their pet theories and are about as soothing a companion as a porcupine would be? Why should any one invite you to her house when she can be perfectly sure that you will stab her with some sarcastic speech that will cut right to the heart?

But, on the contrary, how delightful to have about that kindly, genial, cheerful individual whose presence makes every pleasure more delightful; the sympathetic friend into whose unwearied ears we can pour the stories of our woes; the tactful woman who knows how to lubricate every situation so that human intercourse goes on without the creaking of a single wheel! Verily, we all rise up and call her blessed, and on our invitation list her name leads all the rest.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

IT would appear to those who have noted the great number and variety of women's clubs that woman can have no longing that will not find a society organized for the express purpose of its gratification.

If she aspires to project her spiritual insight into the occult or to smolder that worm of the dust called Man, or to get bacon at cheaper prices, she has only to join a club, and such a desired end, if not attained, is at least set in motion.

But that every longing is not met is proven through the organization by Daysey Mayme Appleton of a society for which the heart of every woman has unconsciously yearned. And the greater the number of her friends, the greater her yearning.

Daysey Mayme had had the parlor of her home made hideous by the gifts of loving friends for years, but not until she received a water color of a yellow lamb on a cerise field with a purple shepherdess and cane decide to read. The result of that rebellion was the recent launching of a club called The Secret Society of Breakers.

No woman need admit she belongs to such a society. Such an admission would cause the estrangement of generous friends and result in charges of lack of appreciation of their gifts.

"The members," explained Daysey Mayme, "are known to me and report to me for assignment, and our method of procedure is this:

"A woman receives a fish platter on which is painted Annie's Swede. The whole scene other appetizing eating scene, and the donor expects it to be placed on the place rail of the dining room.

"The recipient appeals to me, and I deputize one of the active workers of my circle to make a social call on her home. The active worker sees the platter, she is enraptured with it, she asks to hold it, she lets it fall, and it breaks into a hundred pieces.

"She is overcome with remorse, of course, which I appease by paying for her work as soon as it is reported that the plate is beyond mending.

"Our organization is only two weeks old, but in that time members have made calls on other members afflicted with generous friends, and have carelessly dropped and broken seventeen gold fish globes, nine lamps, six vases and fourteen china plaques, and have borrowed fourteen oil paintings and eleven sofa cushions for the purpose of copying, which they have lost on the way home.

"The Secret Society of Breakers will appeal to every woman who has kind and generous friends. In future no woman need go through life with her love for an artistic home blighted by purple and blue vases against her green wall paper, or pink camels worked on a yellow sofa cushion.

"All she need do will be to drop a note to me."

Explained

Two ladies, previously unacquainted, were conversing at a reception. After a few conventional remarks, the younger exclaimed:

"I cannot think what has upset that tall, blond man over there. He was so attentive a little while ago, but he won't look at me now."

"Perhaps," said the other, "he saw me come in. He's my husband."

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Trading in stocks was slow at the start and the tone uncertain. There was a desire to learn what the day's developments regarding Mexico would be. Prices were irregular during the first hour here and at the nd of that period New Haven was 1½ lower at 92. It sold as low as 92 soon after the opening and Bay State Maine was also notably weak, declining 2½ to 62. There was hardly any movement in mining issues. Union Pacific rights descended ten cents to 18, but afterwards recovered to 19.

First hour business in New York amounted to about 53,000 shares and when the morning was half over the prices had improved. New Haven had risen to 93. Price changes were narrow as a rule, but American Can was an exception. It was active and had gained nearly 2 points. Westinghouse advanced 1¼. Union Pacific, Reading and Consolidated, New York Central and American Smelting were fractionally higher.

New Haven Still Lower.

New Haven fell to 92 when the New York market opened, a decline of 2. The tone was heavy on account of suspense over the situation between this country and Mexico. There was a disposition to await the reading of a message on the matter to Congress by President Wilson. Some traders expected decisive developments within twenty-four hours. This was reflected in the London market by the caution displayed in operations in American stocks there.

Among the early losses in New York were American Can ¾, Southern Pacific ¾, Pennsylvania ¾, New York Central ¾, Great Northern preferred ¾, Chesapeake & Ohio ¾ and Canadian Pacific ¾. The gains included Steel common ¼, Union Pacific ¼, Reading ¼, China Copper ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ¼ and American Locomotive ¼.

The turn was quiet.

Government May Do Insurance.

A prediction was made at the convention being held in Chicago to obtain uniform legislation on insurance in the various States that the government may do the country's insuring if underwriters do not change methods. It was made by G. E. Dickson of that city to the American Association of Underwriters. He said:

"In ten years private insurance companies will be a memory and the government will be doing the business unless the underwriters wake up and meet the demands of the people.

"Insurance companies," he continued, "are in the position now that the railroad and express companies were in ten years ago. The one great fault of the insurance companies is interlocking management."

Money for Crop Moving.

The allotment made by the United States Treasury Department for the moving of crops totals $46,000,000. Of this amount $24,700,000 will go to fourteen Western States and $21,800,000 to thirteen Southern States, the government retaining $3,500,000 for emergency deposits.

The Southern banks have asked that their share be deposited in August and September. Those in the West want the money in September, October and November.

The money will be allowed to remain on deposit on an average of four or five months. All of it is to be returned not later than next April, and the Southern bankers, who get their money first, will in December begin returning it back in monthly instalments.

Secretary McAdoo said:

"The funds are deposited in the banks in the West and South at this time because it is believed there is a special demand for the money to assist in marketing of the crops; but if in the East or elsewhere it should be shown that there is need for the temporary use of funds for similar legitimate purposes, the government will be quite as ready to extend similar aid.

"Among the factors considered were the immediate needs of the localities as reported by the examiners of clearing houses in the conferences in Washington; the capital of the different national banks and the character of their business; the amount of money which they have now advancing in their correspondents and the additional accommodations they expect to extend; their present condition shown by the last comptroller's call; their outstanding circulation and the amount of redistments they may have already made."

In each depositary city the government has chosen a special representative who will serve with a clearing house committee of five to pass on all commercial paper, which must be recommended unanimously, as security for deposits.

Row Prevents Currency Ratification.

A row prevented the currency bill from being ratified by the Democratic caucus last night. The session was held because Leader Underwood thought he could end the caucus at once and establish party harmony. But Representative Floyd of Arkansas started the trouble by trying to have the measure amended so that the currency would be upon a complete gold basis even in times when it was desired to meet commercial paper emergencies. It is said that the Floyd amendment will be defeated. There was rather criticism on the part of some Democrats of the so-called asset currency provided for. An attempt was made to have such currency specified and made ineligible for the payment of public debts.

Amendments to the currency bill suggested by the bankers at their Chicago meeting are doomed to rejection by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, according to statements by Chairman Owen.

"Out of abundant caution," he said, "it is our purpose to give the bankers a full and careful hearing next Tuesday."

The bankers' committee consists of George M. Reynolds and E. Fayette Chicago; Ebenezer J. Hill, Connecticut; Festus J. Wade, St. Louis; A. B. Hepburn, New York, and Sol Wexler, New Orleans.

Copper Famine is Feared.

A shortage in copper metal is feared in London, according to W. B. Lawson, London financial correspondent for Hearst newspapers. He cables: "The copper campaign has been resumed in the last few days, and predictions of an early famine are again afloat. Experts here read visible supply statistics in different ways. Some look only at the decrease in the past three years, while others contend that the excess of consumption over production is no longer so great as it was, even without the new mines and with the Mexican supply curtailed. At present the monthly deficit is small, while British and German consumption is likely to decline during the coming Winter, with German trade slackening and a new epidemic of strikes unsettling British trade."

Financial News in Brief.

The London copper warrants market opened firm with spot and futures each £6 higher.

It is understood that government suit against Missouri railroads will soon be instituted to make them refund money collected in excess of rates forbidden by the two-cent law and the maximum freight rates law during the time the law was held up in the federal courts. The amount sought will be about $17,000,000.

Dr. Hall Urges Rod as Punishment

Greater Boston school officials, while agreeing with Dr. G. Stanley Hall of Clarke University, Worcester, who pleaded in an address before Chicago school teachers for the restoration of corporal punishment in the schools object to his statement that punishment should be given while the teacher is "righteously angry."

Dr. Hill said: "The rod furnishes the best punishment to the unruly child, but if used, the teacher must flog when in the full flood of righteous indignation; she should not wait until her anger has cooled."

Clarence H. Denney, superintendent of schools, Malden, said: "A school principal should have the right to inflict corporal punishment, and there are cases where it is decidedly beneficial. It should be administered privately in the presence of one other teacher and after a lapse of some time following the event."

Dr. Edward W. Barrett, member of Medford School Board, said: "The city of Medford is strongly opposed to corporal punishment. While some teachers favor it, and while there might be some cases where it would be beneficial, I am of the opinion that we are decidedly better off without it."

Hanley on Social Call in Air-Boat

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 27.—Social calls in a flying-boat making over seventy miles an hour is the idea of Grover T. Hanley in his new model air racer.

With Ray V. Morris at the steering wheel, Hanley made his first flying-boat call at the shore cottage of Hugh D. Willoughby at Newport. The time for the seventy-two miles covered, coming and going, was only a little over sixty minutes.

Willoughby owns the racing hydroplane "Peirson Flyer" and Hanley flew to look over the craft.

Harrison as Governor of the Philippines an Unfit Appointment

We have waited several days to see if any valid reason or explanation could be given for President Wilson's appointment of Francis Burton Harrison to be Governor-General of the Philippines.

No other foreign post under the government calls for higher qualities of character and capacity, executive skill and experience than that of Governor of eight million Filipinos.

What are these simple, saddle-colored souls to think and say when we offer Mr. Harrison as the American Exhibit A? Where there should be force, we give weakness. Where there should be courage, we give them timidity. Where there should be intelligence, we give them mediocrity. Where there should be independence, we give them a hand-picked product of the Tammany machine. Where there should be a man of initiative and sagacity, we give them a merest messenger boy of Money.

Who and what is Mr. Harrison? Born in New York, he grew up to ask and obtain admission to the bar. More familiar with drawing rooms than courthouses, he has been eminently the sort of lawyer of whom, when they fall ill or leave town, the papers chronicle the interruption to their social engagements without saying anything about their practice.

Tammany usually sends to Congress either obedient dummies or very rich men. Mr. Harrison has been both. A young lawyer, without many clients, but excellent cotillon qualities and fine Virginia family, he married the California heiress, Miss Crocker, who dowered him with great wealth. He became a generous campaign contributor.

Tammany loves gold, and sent him to Congress. By mere lapse of time he has become second to Underwood in seniority on the Ways and Means Committee. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, the President's friend, is third. There is talk of sending Underwood to the Senate, which would make Harrison next in line for the leadership of the House. Is President Wilson sending him to the Philippines to save the House, or to remove one obstacle in Mitchell Palmer's path? This would explain the appointment. It would be altogether laughable if it were not altogether lamentable.

President Wilson is supposed not to like Boss Murphy and Tammany Hall. His Philippine preference for Mr. Harrison in no wise supports this assumption. Since ever he took oath as a Representative, Mr. Harrison has been docile to the Murphy order, tame to the Murphy touch.

When in 1909 the House was in rebellion against the tyranny of Speaker Cannon, Boss Murphy—for a consideration—came to the rescue of that threatened despot. Boss Murphy "ordered" Mr. Harrison to desert the Democrats and run to the aid and comfort of the Cannon enemy. Mr. Harrison ran. Thus do bosses vote their dummies in aid of criminal Standard Oil, or Sugar, or Tobacco. Not politics, but Big Business rules when Criminal Privilege is to be saved.

Mr. Harrison was eagerly willing. He turned traitor at a Murphy nod, and, abandoning his post as a doorkeeper in the house of the Lord, raced across to the tents of the ungodly.

Mr. Harrison's vote against Democratic principles, in support of the gavel of tyranny of Speaker Cannon, was and is the only act to lift its head above the dead and desert levels of his House career. If one except his being barred from the White House by the particular Mr. Taft, that Cannon vote constitutes Mr. Harrison's entire Congressional record.

What powers, working through Mr. Wilson, have secured this senseless promotion of Mr. Harrison? No question in a decade has so wrung the withers of political Washington. The public wasn't clamoring for it. No Philippine interest asked it. Why, then, was so much weakness required at the head of the Filipino affairs?

True, the Philippines are a Sugar preserve, just as they're a favorite hunting ground of Tobacco. Also, these robbers, for obvious causes, prefer the polled agnus breed of Governor. Was it a tobacco hint, or a sugar hunch, that has so boosted Mr. Harrison?

As against this, come others who declare that the bug beneath the chip of the Harrison appointment is a bug not of tariff, but of social hue. They whisper of blue room, red room reasons, and inform one that—having in view the gentleman's feelings—Mr. Harrison is sent to Manila only to get him out of Washington.

To put an end to this conflict of harrowing surmise, Mr. Wilson should take mankind into his confidence, and give in full his Filipino reasons for the Harrison hopes within him. A White House silence at this crisis would be unfair to sugar, tobacco, the railroads, the Filipinos, Mr. Underwood, Mr. Palmer, Mr. Harrison and society—to say nothing of the public at large.

Mrs. Pankhurst and Her "Arson Squads"

If it is true that Mrs. Pankhurst has at last "called off" the "arson squads," vitriol-throwers and window-smashing brigades of the British militants, she has taken the only step possible for the real advancement of the cause of woman suffrage in her country. A former suffrage bill was beaten in the House of Commons by nine votes, but the latest one, after the burning and breaking campaign, by more than forty votes. With the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Foreign Secretary and other influential members of the Cabinet in favor of such a bill, the women never had a better chance than in the present Liberal Parliament.

The militants have never represented the great mass of English women who want the vote. The militants declared that some day one of their number would be killed and the whole country would flame with anger. But one deplorable day, at the Derby, one of their number was killed by the King's horse, and the country did not flare up. Evidently the reaction had set in.

The women of England have many serious causes for complaint that do not exist for the women of America. This fact probably accounts for the phenomenon of militancy. But it could never prevail against British stolidity, and its abandonment will rescue the cause from reproach and increasing opposition.

Live First = = Talk Afterward

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company

ARE you a student of the power of mind over matter? Are you talking to every one you meet about "Universal Life Principle" and "Vibration" and "Mental and Spiritual Science" and all the other expressions so in vogue today among advanced thinkers?

If you are, see to it that your life illustrates your theories. Do not let it all end in talk.

I have known a self-supporting woman to use all her income in literature and lectures and lessons on these subjects: "How to Control Destiny," "How to Grow Success," "How to Attain Self-Mastery" and "How to Be Well and Prosperous." Yet she was always ailing. She had not one penny saved, nor respectable clothing in her wardrobe; she slighted her work and forgot her duties and was altogether an unsatisfactory human being.

At almost any gathering of people identified with or interested in Mental, or Christian Science, or New Thought, or any kindred subject, a large majority of the unkempt and nervous and erratic beings are to be encountered. This is true, we know, of all new theories and creeds, for the disappointed and dissatisfied souls of earth naturally turn to new avenues of thought, hoping to find peace. But when we find these unfortunate types representing a religion or a theory and talking its precepts to every passer-by, it is a matter of more than temporary regret.

Until you can indicate by your life, your face, your manner and your work that you have found a solution for the problem of existence and a panacea for human ills, do not talk about it. Wait in the silence and grow.

It is a simpler matter to be filled with a conviction than it is to prove that conviction to the world.

But while there are thousands of people today talking and writing the philosophy not ten in any thousand are living what they talk.

A woman who was all nerves and hysteria and who kept herself and every one about her in confusion and excitement over her troubles and ailments was urged to try Spiritual Science.

"Why, I teach it," she said. "I do not need any one to help me in that way, as I have a class of young women to whom I have been revealing the truth for some time."

That is the great trouble with the world today.

We have so many people teaching and so few living the truth. Because you have gained a little light and begin to understand the philosophy of life do not set yourself up for a teacher or an exhorter until you have proven by your life that what you teach and preach is practicable.

Wait until you can keep yourself in health before you begin healing others.

Wait until you are successful in your undertakings before you tell others the way to win success.

Live first—talk afterward.

Dorothy Dix's Article —ON— Vanity of Men—They Are Just as Conceited as Women, and Far More Susceptible to Flattery.

By DOROTHY DIX.

RECENTLY the papers contained the sad intelligence of the serious wounding of a young man whose throat was cut by his three-story collar.

The account of this deplorable accident says that the man is what is known as "a swell dresser," and that in particular he has a neck built upon such liberal and giraffe-like lines that he can wear a collar of such altitude that it is the despairing envy of all the other young men of his acquaintance. A few mornings ago, resplendent in all his shining expanse of white linen, in attempting to get off a street car, his foot slipped, and he received a bad fall, as a result of which the sharp edges of his collar penetrated his neck, inflicting two gashes that required the services of a doctor.

This incident scores one against man for self-sacrificing vanity, for no woman has yet been choked to death by her collar, though many a short-necked woman has found out what that verse in the Bible means that says, "He, being in torment, lifted up his eyes."

Men Think That Women Have Monopoly on Vanity

The truth is that men have talked so much about women's vanity that we have come to think that the fair sex monopolizes this weakness. Far from it. Men are just as conceited about their looks as women are. Of course, they haven't as good an opportunity to show it, because unkind fate has narrowed them down to a Spartan simplicity in the way of personal adornment, but what they have they make the most of.

No debutante, fussing over her first party frock, was ever so particular as a man about his neckties. He doesn't hesitate to consign half a dozen white ones to the scrap basket if he musses them in tying, or fails to get the proper set to the bow, while no amount of family affection would induce him to wear a home-made one. There are places he couldn't be dragged to by wild horses unless he had on an evening suit, nor could you sell him a hat whose crown was an infinitesimal degree lower or higher than every other man's hat, even if you threw in a chromo with it.

Observe the pains he takes to show his fancy socks, and note that the crease in his trousers is never off his mind for a single instant. In the theatre, in the car, in the parlor, the moment he gets seated he begins hitching at his trousers to preserve that razor edge, and it is worse than useless to attempt to engage his attention until it has been tenderly settled in place.

Man's Belief in Power of Fascination Never Wavers

Now it is just as awful and heart-breaking a thing for a tailor-made frock to bag at the knees as it is for trousers, but you never see a woman in public spending her time pulling at a seam in her skirt.

But the most amusing and child-like exhibition of vanity of which men are ever guilty is when one is told that he looks like some famous man, and goes around for ever after in a ridiculous pose, trying to emphasize the resemblance.

Think of the commonplace young men we have all known who cultivated a distraught air, and a pale and melancholy countenance because some indiscreet person had detected a fancied resemblance between them and Booth.

Recall the pompous gentleman whose principal object in life seems to be to cultivate a pair of whiskers and tell you how they were taken for Chauncey Depew, or the excessively English-American who develops an ingrowing British accent, and spends his days and nights imagining he looks like King George. This is a phase of vanity that is exclusively masculine. A woman's vanity never reaches the pitch of understudying celebrities.

Men are much vainer than women about their personal charms. A man's belief in his powers of fascination never wavers. He never grows too old, nor too fat, nor too bald to arrogate to himself admiration that a woman in her palmiest days would hardly dare to claim. The elderly millionaire, though he be the homeliest of his sex, can see no reason why he shouldn't fire the fancy, and come up to the ideal of budding sixteen. In his own eyes he is, now and forever, the embodiment of all the manly charms and graces, and he can never be persuaded that any woman wouldn't have the time of her life sitting around looking at him and listening to him.

A woman, on the other hand, is taught from her cradle that she may only hope to inspire love while she is young and attractive, and when her glass tells her that this is no longer the case she looks with distrust on the man who asks her to marry him. Of course, there have been cases where rich old women have married mere boys, but their insane jealousy of their young husbands proved that the women knew that the men married them for their money.

The rich old man, however, who marries a young girl is troubled by no such doubts. His bride may yawn in his face, and shrink from his touch, but he never suspects that she had any other object in view than pure unadulterated affection in marrying him.

Men Are More Easily Flattered Than Women

A man shows his superior vanity to woman in the way he talks about himself. He thinks nothing of spending an entire evening in a monologue about himself, his business, his amusements, what he said to so and so, and what they said to him, etc. etc.—but no woman would dare to try to talk to a man for thirty minutes about her dressmaker, and her affairs. She knows that at the end of five minutes he would get up and beat it away from her presence.

Men are much more susceptible to flattery than women are. A woman looks a gift compliment in the mouth, but a man will swallow any kind of a jolly—hook, bait and sinker. This is what makes men the prey of the adventuress, and amenable to the tactful wife who knows how to judiciously spread the salve. Through their vanity are men worked, and we could better spare a better quality.

If men were not vain—but, thank goodness, they are!

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

EDITORIAL APPROVED BY YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION WORKERS

THE MRS. ASTOR

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your editorial, with the effective picture by Tad, called "The Time to Get Ahead Is Now," hits so well the keynote of what we are trying to do at the New York West Side Y. M. C. A. that we have put both of them on our bulletin board, so that men coming into the building may see them.

We wish to thank you for the message that they convey, and believe that because of them many men will not listen to the promptings of their own nature to do the easiest things during the Summer, but will be willing to do some of the harder and more disagreeable things that may be necessary to get a good start on their Fall work.

I wish that you might have an inspiration about the 1st of October along the line of "Doing Leisure Time for Study," having it illustrated in a similar way. We are reaching about 5,000 for study, but it ought to be twice that number.

Yours truly, L. W.
Director Educational Department.

THE MRS. ASTOR

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—In the AMERICAN of Aug. 7 I noticed an article saying that Mrs. Ava Willing Astor had returned from Europe to take her place as THE Mrs. John Astor, a title to which she has no more right than you or I have.

It seems to me as if Mrs. Astor in taking as great liberty in using as THE Mrs. John Astor now as if she had when she into Col. John Jacob Astor was alive. There is only one Mrs. John Astor now, and that is the young lady who was formerly Miss Madeline Force.

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor forfeited the right to be addressed as Mrs. John Astor when she divorced the into Colonel.

I hope that you will give this article room in your paper, as I am sure that there are other readers of the AMERICAN who are of the same opinion as I am in this matter.
